

Sleepers

Spews

“Stop asking me about the fucking budget.” -48

Sports

Something happened but no one cared - 69

December 11th, 2013 ■ Issue No. 18 ■ Volume 104

December 11th, 2013 ■ Issue No. 18 ■ Volume 104

THE getaway

THE UNOFFICIAL STUDENT TOILET PAPER AT THE U OF A

THE UNOFFICIAL STUDENT TOILET PAPER AT THE U OF A

“That is one big pile of shit.”

Written by Fake Black    Real photo by Give M. Spanks

University OKs communal “shit pits” in Quad, Humanities

What's that smell? Turns out it's not just the shitty budget situation anymore. Following an unexpected 98.5 per cent cut to the University of Alberta's operating budget, public bathrooms are the first campus service on the chopping block.

In response to heartfelt pleas of despair on UAlberta Confessions' Facebook page, U of A President Endearing Samosas said the university is making the most out of a trying situation.

"I mean, we literally have no budget. There's no room in the budget for bathrooms anymore or the 0.5-ply toilet paper we used to fund for that matter," she shrugged. The administration did, however, find room in the budget to excavate a giant hole in the middle of Quad to serve as a public restroom facility.

"We've told students from the beginning that these cuts will absolutely not fall on their backs," she said, looking over the literal hundreds of students pooping in an open pit in Quad.

"So we're cutting services that aren't absolutely necessary."

The removal of public bathrooms is also a move for a more gender-inclusive campus, Samosas said, adding that “there’s nothing more gender-neutral than bearing your bathing-suit parts in front of all your classmates."

But the toilet swamp brewing in the middle of campus is the least of Randy Shrimp's worries. The fourth-year Chemistry student said he can't walk through Chemistry West without Italian men aggressively trying to sell him mineral makeup and hair straighteners. In a move to generate extra funds, the university has shut down the CAB Tim Horton's and replaced it with pop-up charity bake sales and independent vendors.

"It's bad enough that I have to trek from Tory to Quad everyday to take a piss in the open air," said Shrimp. "But now I have to pity-buy stale popcorn balls from sad-looking strangers? The #struggle is real."

Samosas assured students that the increased enterprise ventures across campus are for the best, and are the only way to keep tuition hikes from falling on the backs of her beloved students.

"We pride ourselves in being a top-notch university, so we're drawing from donors and fundraising as much as possible," she said, pulling an Avon catalogue out of her trench coat and launching into a sales pitch.

PLEASE DON'T SEE SHIT PITZ ♦ PAGE 6

R.I.P.

1450-2013

PRINT MEDIA DEAD AT 563

CURRENT STAGE OF GRIEF: DENIAL

For more, check out our website at www.thegetawayonline.ca

3 FREE LINES

THE getaway
YOU NEVER VISIT US (at GTWY.CA)

Wednizzle, Notchristmasyet, 2013
Volume 104 Issue No. 18
Published since asifyoucare.
Circulation out of this world 938469283569237469

news haiku
Editor-in-Tears
He got beat up this one time.
I made him some tea.

news haiku
Lock up yo gingers
Don't say I didn't warn you
Anal-A's coming

news haiku
Who art CyberWench?
Methinks it's a mystery.
Shh... Don't ask questions.

news haiku
Mmm... dat News Bitch tho...
Feeling so moist and newsy
But hating orange.

news haiku
BB reporturr
She split open her pants once
It was amazing

news haiku
Heaven help Darcy
One time he found human shit
On paper towels

news haiku
Pink hair is poppin'
She a bad gurl, a bad bitch
Don't mess with Arts, witch.

news haiku
Man of mystery
Volunteers love him to bits
But what's he thinking?

news haiku
Multimedia.
Such a long word, such a dope
editor, bitchez.

news haiku
Need a photo, y'all?
Photoshopping Indira?
Who do you call? KEVZ.

news haiku
Tony G's a peach <3
Making me moist-o-metres...
Plus, his wife is cool.

gettin' down to business
staff

DRUG LORD Tryin' Wrongsblow
biznatch@d&d.ca

A-LITTLE-TOO-GRAPHIC DESIGNER Veekee Weekee
putyoclotheson@sheesh.ca

WEBMASTA Snortin' Bling
whateva@internetz.ca

CIRCULATION PALS
You, maybe?
applyplz@weneedyourhelp.ca

The Getaway is published by the Motherfucking Geniuses of Canadian Student Journalism, a student-run, totally bitchin', apathetic, extremely profitable
"organization," operated in accordance with YOUR MOM.
The Getaway is not as proud as you might think to be a founding member of CUP.

complaints
Omg stfu, I'm sick of your complaints. GET A REAL JOB.

copyleft

All materials appearing in The Getaway bear copyright of their creator(s) and may not be used without written consent. Or no consent. It don't matta!

Snooze

PHOTO OF THE WEAK "THIS LOOKS LIKE IT WAS SHOT BY A POTATO" — Kevvy

CRUSTY VULVA

sesame streeters

COMPILED AND PHOTOGRAPHED BY Please don't make me do Streeters again

As you may have heard, sex feels pretty good.
WE ASKED...

What's your favourite sex position?

Cookie Monster
"I love eating out ;)"

The Count
"I like ... 67 ... 68 ... 69 — yes! 69! Ah ah ah
ah ah!"

Big Bird
"Spread eagle."

Oscar the Grouch
"Anything that's filthy-ass nasty, bitch."

HAVE YOUR WEEKLY DOSE OF THE GATEWAY

SIGN UP FOR OUR MAILING LIST ON GTWY.CA AND WE'LL EMAIL YOU TOP STORIES OF THE WEEK ON THURSDAY MORNING!

BEAMED STRAIGHT TO YOUR INBOX!

SIGN UP WITHIN THE NEXT TWO WEEKS.
AND YOU'LL ALSO BE ENTERED INTO A DRAW TO WIN AN AWESOME PRIZE!

Enmoistened President flaunts her lovely lady lumps

Anal-A Weinerton

REDHEAD LOVA ■ @IWANNAHOTREDHEAD

In an attempt to raise money following horrific budget cuts earlier this year, the U of A recently announced the release of a limited edition swimsuit calendar featuring none other than President Indikini Samaraswimwear.

The calendar features 12 images of a scantily-clad Samaraswimwear wearing a different themed bikini for each month of the year, and all proceeds are going towards the drastically impoverished central administration. Since the calendar's debut on stands last week, it has proven to be the most popular item on campus and is already going into its third printing.

Samaraswimwear has been very vocal about her participation in the calendar so far, stating that it was a "freeing" experience and that she'd be more than open to doing a second calendar if it meant more money for the university.

"Sometimes you just gotta let these puppies loose if you wanna make some dough," she purred, jiggling her bosom suggestively.

The calendar has left quite the impression on some of Samaraswimwear's supporters, few of whom have seen the President in so little clothing before. The month of September, for instance, features the president wearing a sensual green and gold swimsuit in honour of the U of A, while December sees her dressed in a Santa hat — and very little else.

NAUGHTY NOVEMBER You, too, can absorb the glory of President Indikini Samaraswimwear in your very own home. HUMID DAMPRIZZLE

Perhaps the most popular image though will be March, where we find Samaraswimwear lounging in a bathtub with nothing but dollar bills covering her naughty bits — an homage, she says, to the month that budget cuts rocked the U of A.

"I wanted something that said, 'Look, losing money sucks, but my lovely lady lumps sure don't,' " she explained. "I'm hoping this will make students see that I'm willing to get on their level."

Although university administration couldn't be reached for comment, they released a statement saying it was Samaraswimwear's own idea to star in the calendar, and that the $100,000 they've already raised proves it was a worthwhile idea.

"If there's one thing our President knows how to do, it's shake what her mama gave 'er — who were we to stop her?" read the statement.

Proof of the calendar's popularity can be seen in a quick jaunt around campus, as male and female students alike can be found sneaking covert glances between the pages when they think their fellow classmates aren't looking.

■ "Sometimes you just gotta let these puppies loose if you wanna make some dough."

INDIKINI SAMARASWIMWEAR
ENBOSOMED PRESIDENT

Ivanor Penishandle, a U of A student who spent four days sleeping in a tent outside the U of A bookstore to be the first to get his hands on a copy of the calendar, says it's well worth the investment to get to see Samaraswimwear in such a rare, vulnerable state.

"Look at the supple skin, that glistering hair, those abs," he said, lovingly stroking the image of Indira in a sexy turkey costume for the month of November.

The calendar will remain on stands for the remainder of the semester, and is available for the entirely reasonable price of $69.69 at the U of A bookstore in SUB.

Cash-strapped int'l students begin selling body parts to pay for tuition

Scandalous Floss

RESIDENT BIZNATCH ■ @NASHWENCH

Aimee Littlefunds winces as she lifts her white t-shirt, displaying 18 jagged stitches that mark the place her kidney was removed. But it's all worth it — the surgery has afforded her one more semester at the U of A.

Littlefunds is one of many international students heading to the U of A Hospital, which recently began paying international students for their organs in an effort to help them cope financially with their upcoming five per cent tuition increase.

■ "Just when I thought I had given all I had to this university, I realized, 'Wait a minute — I haven't!'"

AIMEE LITTLEFUNDS
U OF A CASH COW

"I was awake during the procedure, and it looks like it might be a little infected now, but it's all worth it because I can go to school for at least one more semester," Littlefunds said, smiling hazily.

News last month of the proposed tuition hike has many international students planning for the rough times ahead, but the hospital's generous offer is one of the only ways the university is helping students alleviate the financial strain.

It's a quick procedure that benefits both students and patients, hospital staff said.

"We've already got about 57 kidneys, 49 livers, 89 sections of intestine and one pancreas," surgeon Dr. Dexter Gotyoparts said. "Oh, we also got about a dozen corneas.

SUCCULENT STUDENTS Mmm...bodays. SUPPLIED BY THE ORGANS OF THE DESPERATE

"With the switch to audio textbooks, students don't really need to see anymore."

Littlefunds, an arts student from England, said she received almost $4,000 for her kidney, and is considering donating portions of her intestine to cover the cost of textbooks. She said she will still fall short in paying her tuition by more than $5,000, but considers organ donation a step in the right direction.

"Just when I thought I had given all I had to this university, I realized, 'Wait a minute — I haven't!'" she explained. "I'm happy I'll be able to graduate with my coveted piece of paper — minus a few pieces of my body, but who really needs those?"

Dr. Gotyoparts said the organs will be used to save precious domestic students from various ailments. With few options available, dozens of international students continue to walk into his operating room for organ removal, he said.

"It's kind of fun to do," he said, yanking a fresh kidney from a student biting on a leather belt. "I've personally done way worse for a couple thousand bucks, so I'm actually surprised we haven't seen more of these kids coming in."

Proudly sporting a fresh scar from his own recent kidney removal, U of A Students' Union Vice-President (Academic) Musty Smellin said cuts last March to the university's operating budget mean cuts have to be made to student bodies.

"We thought it would be a great idea to fight this — cuts to cuts," he said. "There's always a way out of a difficult situation. Sometimes you just need to bite the belt and take it like a man."

KEVY SKANK

news queefs

BEGUILED BY Le Miguel

Renowned U of A paleontologist Philip Currasaurus has been charged with the first-degree murder of Yoshi, a defenceless baby dinosaur, in what local authorities are calling a "cold-blooded and despicable act."

Police found the mangled skeleton of the infant Triceratops in one of the university's paleontology labs last Thursday, after Currasaurus allegedly "dug it up from the ground" in the middle of the Alberta badlands and brought it back to campus.

Edmonton police chief Hank Cuffsalot said he hasn't seen a murder case this horrific in his 36 years on the job.

"I can't even imagine what kind of sick, twisted creature would do such a thing," he said.

"These creatures are seriously extinct — we can't afford to just slaughter them off whenever we feel like it.

"The fact that he's claiming he randomly "dug it up" was the most shocking aspect to me. I mean, it doesn't even make sense. Why on earth would a baby dinosaur skeleton just be lying in the dirt in the Alberta badlands?"

Currasaurus was led away from his U of A office by authorities shortly after the dinosaur remains were found last week. According to witnesses, he kicked and screamed all the way down the university's hallways as he fought to proclaim his innocence.

"You don't understand," he allegedly wailed. "I excavated the dinosaur, I didn't execute it!"

U of A President Indorito Slamarama held a media availability Tuesday morning conveying her shock and dismay that a revered and trusted member of the campus community would commit such a heinous act.

"The University of Alberta has a long-held tradition of protecting the province's dinosaurs — not mercilessly slaughtering them in the name of science," she said. "I'm just glad we caught him when we did.

"I mean, dinosaurs have been extinct for hundreds of millions of years. He's clearly been covering up his gruesome crimes for a very long time."

5 Teens!

No Adults!

56 LITRES OF CUM!!!

THE BREAKFAST RUB

BYOButtplugs!

At the Porneau,
Smarch 26

Free to Cum!

OPA! WORKERS SAY THEY'RE SORRY Are they really?

KEVWUS SCHENKOPOLLOUS

Opa! issues heartfelt apology for stereotyping Greek community

Sahara LesBian
SENIOR FRATERNAL CORRESPONDENT • @STFUDEKES

Fraternity and sorority members on campus have once again taken up arms against destructive stereotypes of the Greek community by targeting Opa!, the newly established Greek fast food chain in the Students’ Union Building.

The University of Alberta’s InterFraternity Council launched a formal complaint against the restaurant last week, and has begun a campus-wide boycott of all Opa! menu items and products in an effort to halt what may be irreversible damage to the Greek community’s reputation.

“I am shocked and horrified at the blatant cultural misrepresentations Opa! is perpetuating on our campus,” IFC President Christopher Nosouvlaki said.

“Fraternity and sorority members at the U of A have been working tirelessly for years to abolish these harmful notions that food items such as pitas or tzatziki somehow represent our values as Greeks, and I won’t let a handful of minimum-wage fast food employees destroy everything I’ve worked for.”

Despite their astonishment at the audacity of the fraternities’ complaints, the Opa! head office issued a statement Monday apologizing for any offense it may have given to U of A Greeks.

“We would like to sincerely apologize if our condonement of mediterranean cuisine interfered with their sacrosanct customs.”

OPA! SPOKESPERSON
OPA! HEADQUARTERS

“We are extremely sorry for any misconceptions of the Greek community we may have provoked or perpetuated on the University of Alberta campus,” the statement read.

“Fraternities and sororities have long held strong, traditional values such as party culture and alcohol consumption. We would like to sincerely apologize if our condonement of mediterranean cuisine interfered with their sacrosanct customs.”

But some are less than appeased by the Opa! apology. Third-year pre-med student and fraternity member Douchus Brotziki said he noticed the statement seemed suspiciously passive aggressive, and has organized a protest calling for the Students’ Union to evict Opa! and replace it with a less offensive restaurant.

“I won’t be happy until Opa! vacates SUB,” Brotziki said, holding a picket sign with the slogan, “It’s FIJI, not tzatziki!”

But some are concerned the Greeks’ fury has gone too far — what started as peaceful protest efforts quickly escalated into full-scale riot tactics against Opa! employees.

“I honestly have no idea what’s going on,” said one confused Opa! worker attempting to scoop Greek salad into a container while dodging a shower of kalamata olives aimed at his head.

“I’m just taking orders and stuffing pitas — I couldn’t care less about the reputation of the Greek community on campus,” he added as he ducked under the sneeze guard from a flying spoonful of yogurt.

news queefs

COMPILED BY Smellin ZeVillain

CHECK YO PRIVILEGE BITCHEZ

Unwind those minds and loosen your tongues, because starting in January, the University of Alberta will begin implementing a campus-wide privilege check system for its students.

The system is designed to help students check their privilege before entering campus, allowing them to interact with other students without constantly having to check their privilege.

According to Dude Bromanski, Chair of Privilege Awareness in the Department of Women’s and Gender Studies, the system was created to allow all students to discuss sensitive issues about “the minorities” without having to worry that their privilege would impact other people’s ability to understand their point of view is correct.

“There were times we would hear from our cisgendered, white, upper-class, Christian, able-bodied, straight male students that they felt there were no issues they could freely comment on without being called out for their many privileges,” Bromanski said.

To help them and the many other privileged students on campus, a task force was struck to examine the issue and suggest ways to make it easier for students to understand and check their privileges.

There will now be a special registration system for all students and staff, so they can register all the privileges they have to make the daily privilege check easier and fully prepare white, middle class political “science” students who have lived in Canada their entire life to use their one week-long trip to Cambodia to convince their classmates that they’re quite knowledgeable, in fact, of what needs to be done to solve third world issues.

“I just walk onto campus and press the ‘Check Privilege’ button on the UAlberta iPhone app, and my privilege is checked for the day,” fifth-year political “science” student John Smith said.

“It’s so fast and easy, just like coming up with opinions about the lives of the less privileged.”

From Bromanski’s perspective, the development took many years of committee meetings, focus groups and task forces to come up with the system. At one point, he noted they were considering physical booths around campus where students could physically check off their many privileges. But due to cost concerns, the program had to move online.

Women’s and Gender Studies will be holding special workshops to help students understand what privileges they have so they can check them properly. Other departments have also indicated a desire to host workshops for their students. The chair of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences, Hypatia Fields, notes that being good at math is a privilege that many arts students don’t enjoy.

“We haven’t really had conversations in science and engineering about how privileged we are to understand R and algebraic expressions,” she said while softly patting the head of a panting arts student kneeling beside her.

“It’s important for us to understand that being able to calculate tip percentages in our heads is not an ability that all people are able to have.”

Please sir, I beg of you: from whence doth it cum?

Pandering Snot
SQUIRTEXPRT • @DRIPPINGFLUIDS

A U of A professor has recently made an explosive discovery using a hands-on approach — and had an orgasmic time doing it.

Associate Chair of Projectile Fluid Studies William Geterwet said he has found the perfect technique to achieving the mythical female orgasm. With the assistance of graduate student Mary Menow, Geterwet said the secret is patience, a steady hand and just a touch of divine intervention.

“I really couldn’t have done this without Mary,” Geterwet said. “I like working with my hands, and I’d like to see where our intimate partnership could go from here.

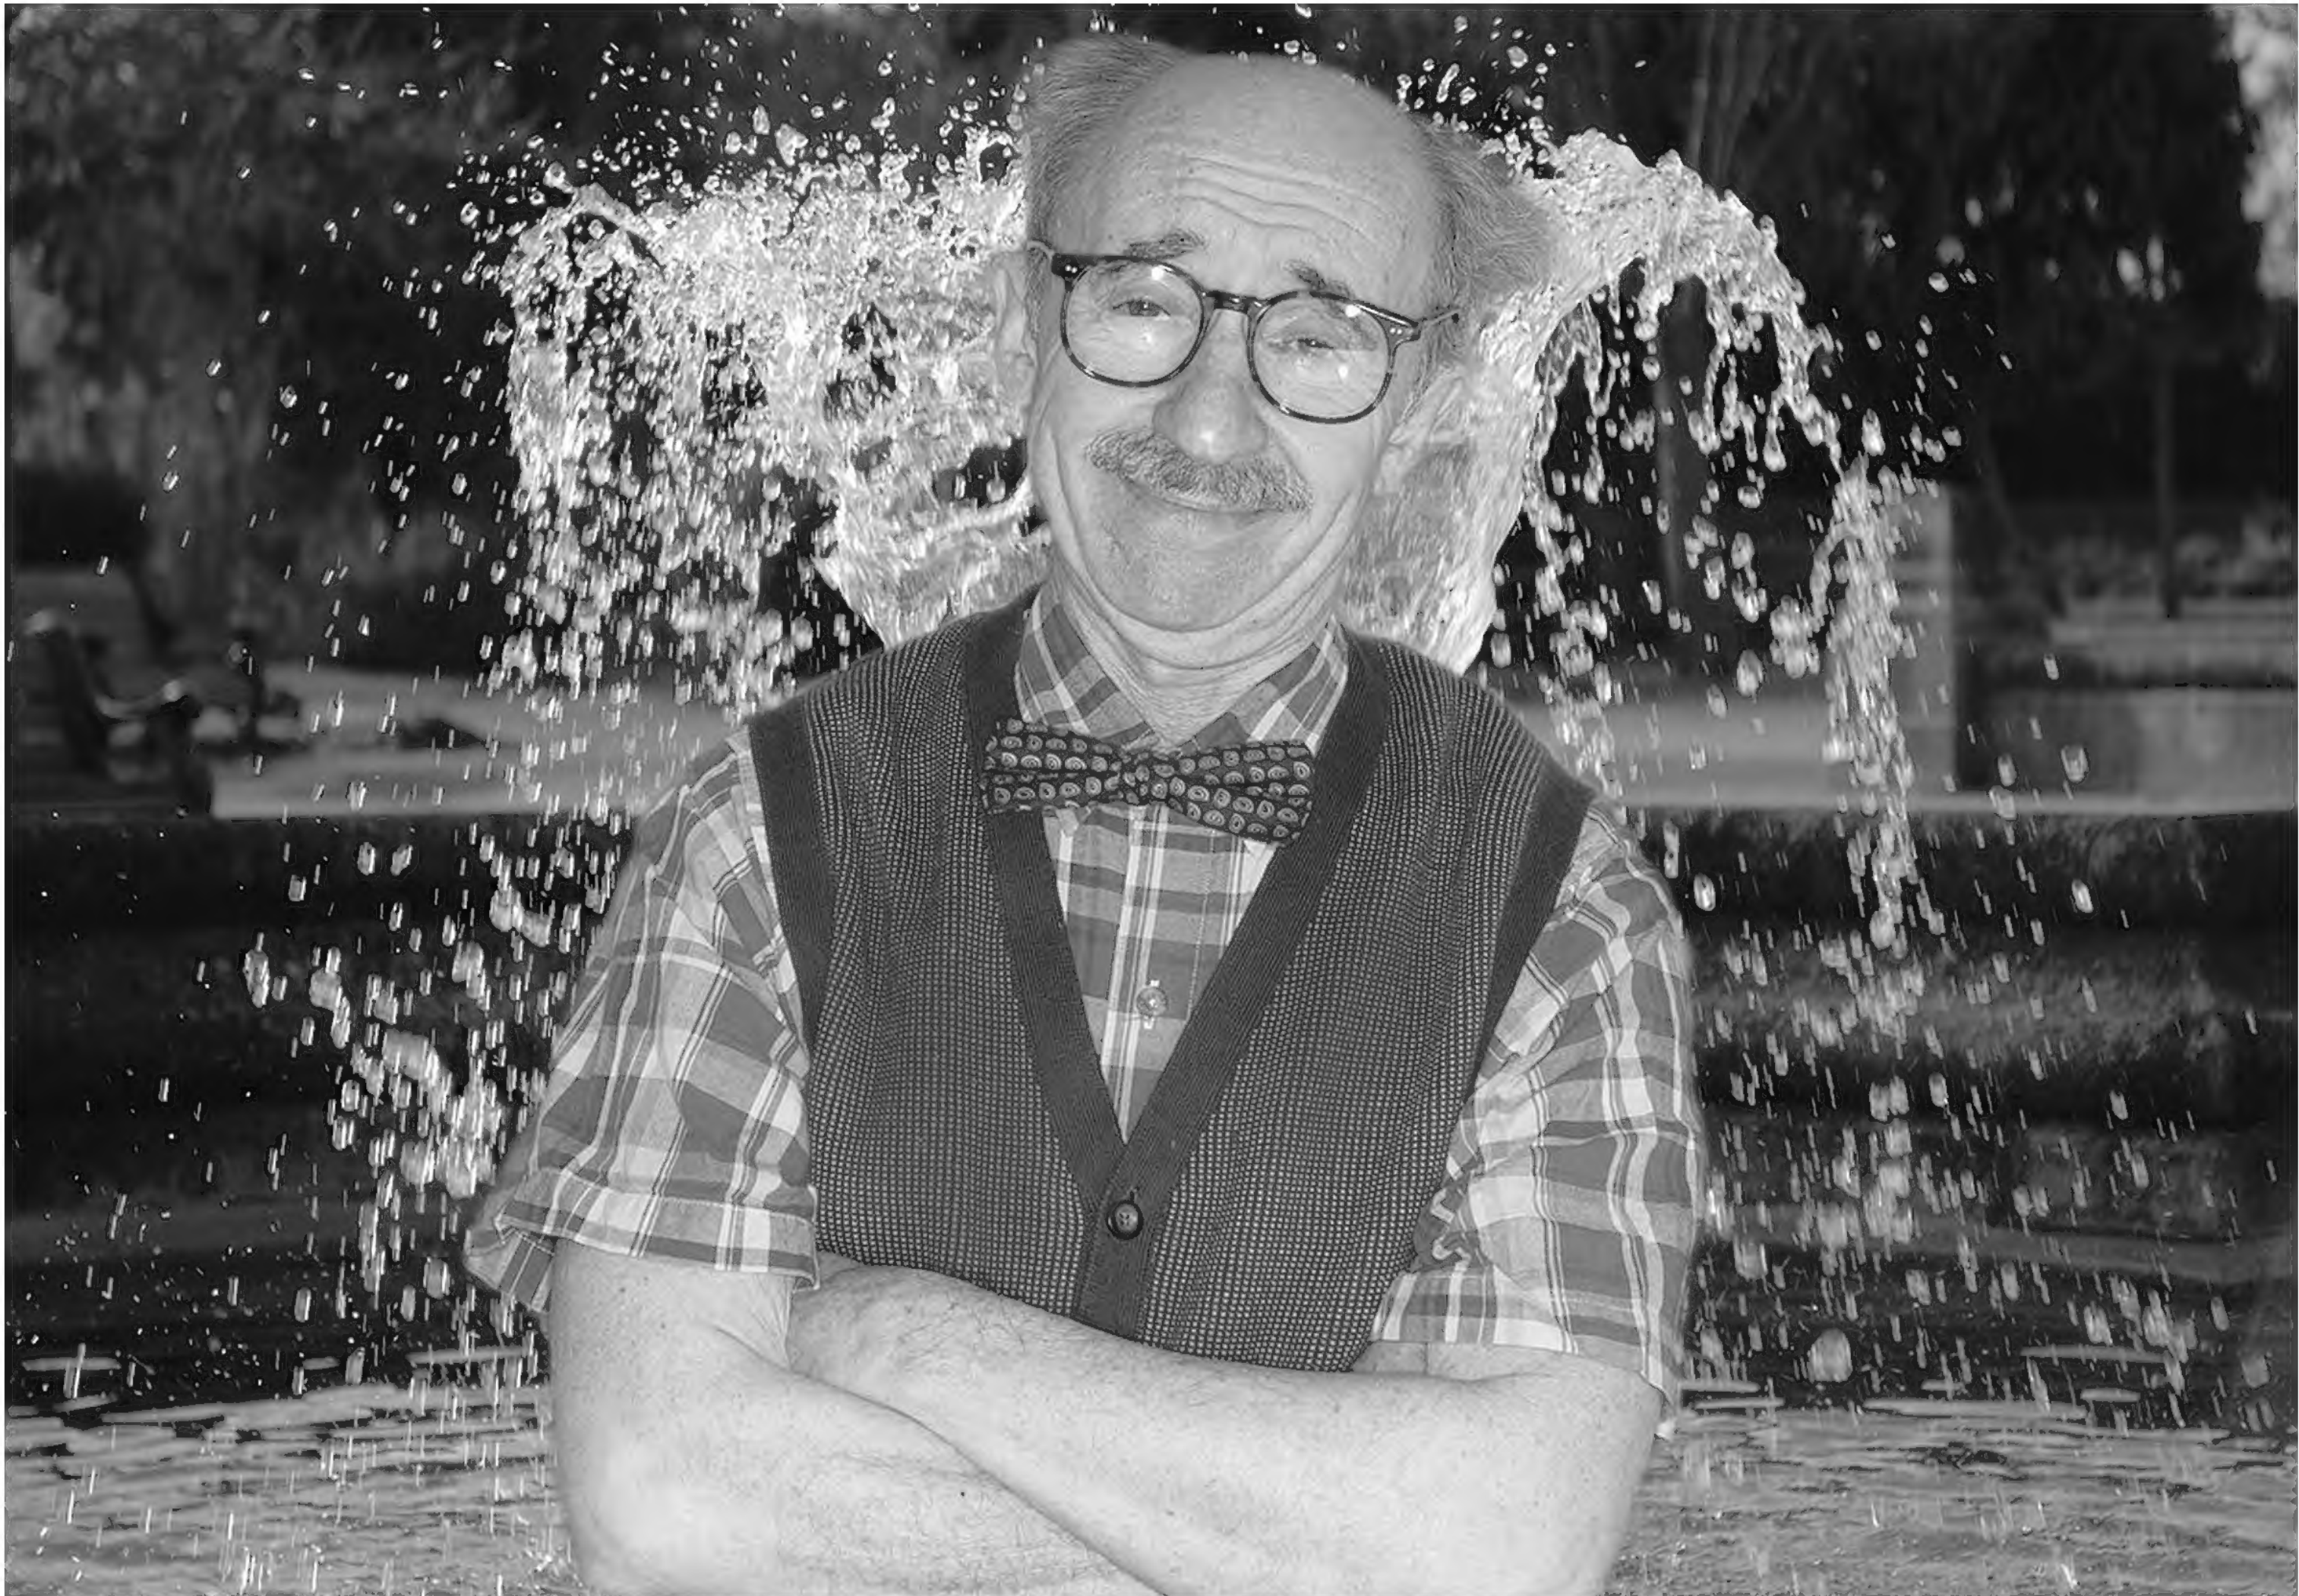

“I could just do this all day and all night, it’s really keeping me young and getting my creative juices freely flowing.”

The 86-year-old professor said he believes the spurting liquid comes from the female G-spot, but only when Mercury is in retrograde and its moons align in the uncanny shape of a clitoris. But Geterwet won’t take all the credit — it’s partly an act of The Lord, he said.

He said he’s not willing to divulge his secrets just yet, but added that his technique still needs some refining.

“I’ve built up quite a bit of strength in my hands, and Mary seems to think our research is improving because of it,” he said.

Geterwet will require an arsenal of volunteers to test his hypothesis on where the fluid “cums” from. The research has caused quite a stir on campus, with dozens of students lining up outside his door to volunteer for the next round of testing.

EJACULATING ACADEMIC U of A professor William Geterwet has taken a keen interest in the female art of squirting.

KWIRT SPRITZ

“I think this is a great learning opportunity for everyone involved,” said Ivanna Cuhm, one of the students waiting outside Geterwet’s door. “I really want to help out in any way I can, but especially in human trials. I would be best at that, for sure.”

Another student, who spoke on condition of anonymity, was quickly removed from the lineup after saying he hoped to learn more about Geterwet’s techniques by observing his research.

Menow said she can’t wait to work more closely with Geterwet.

“He’s so, oh, oh god, he’s just so ... great with his hands,” she said, gasping for air. “I have never been so satisfied with my research and with myself.”

Geterwet said the technique can be recreated in your very own home with the help of a little lubrication and an eager participant.

Just make sure your participant stays hydrated with plenty of water, he said.

“I’ve done a lot of research on various fluids in my 86 years, but nothing has astounded me more than this,” he said.

Edmonton PotterWatch Institute for Charity Presents
In support of Youth Empowerment and Support Services

ROCKING CHARITY YULE BALL

SATURDAY, JANUARY 4, 2014

SUPPORT YESS THIS NEW YEAR

TICKETS $60 for MUSIC, FOOD and COAT CHECK

BUY YOURS TODAY AT WWW.YEGYULEBALL.EVENTBRITE.CA

ENTER TO WIN TICKETS TO SEE

IN THEATRES WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 18

EMAIL CONTESTS@GATEWAY.UALBERTA.CA
FOR YOUR CHANCE TO WIN A DOUBLE PASS!

gateway

U of A takes Getaway's advice, proposes Average College

Michelangelo Marcus
NEWS BITCH • @SODAMP

In a sufficiently adequate show of support for less-than-stellar students and general campus mediocrity, the U of A recently announced it will take the advice of The Getaway and implement a new Average College in place of the recently proposed Leadership College.

University administrators riled up heavy criticism from the campus community last month when The Getaway reported on its proposed plans to build an elite residence for the top 144 students and suggested it try fostering a widespread spirit of dull monotony, rather than advocating for unlikely achievement.

▪ “I am somewhat content to announce that the university will be doing the bare minimum required to maintain students’ overall decency.”

INFERIOR SAMARAMEH
HER MOISTNESS

Now, after several weeks, an adequate amount of consideration and a typical number of university committee meetings, the U of A has decided to build a modest residence in the middle of campus and populate it with the most satisfactory students available.

“I am somewhat content to announce that the university will be doing the bare minimum required to maintain students’ overall decency,” U of A President Inferior Samaramah said in a fairly lacklustre press conference Tuesday morning.

“Scraping by with the bare minimum is something this university basically supports, and this administration is slightly proud to be putting a modest amount of effort into making this proposal a reality.”

AVERAGE ASSHOLE Don’t exert yourself, kids.

KIZZLE MASHIZZLE

The Average College will now admit 144 of the most mediocre students on campus. Students must submit their official transcripts and resumés proving they haven’t exceeded a B+ average or overexerted themselves in extracurriculars.

The Project Leader for the college, Vice-President (Intermediatement) O’Nevermind Oughtagiveup, said

preliminary designs for the building haven’t yet been created, but will probably pull through at the last minute.

“Yeah, we’re thinking of something pretty cool, like maybe a so-so building with a run-of-the-mill floorplan. Nothing out of the ordinary,” he said.

“It’s a bit early to be thinking about these things, isn’t it? I’ll get around to it next week. Promise.”

Joe Deec, a third-year science student and moderately hopeful applicant to the Average College, said he submitted his application about a day or two after the deadline, but probably still has a fair chance at getting in.

“Hmm. Well, I think I’m a fairly tolerable candidate for the college... Yeah, I guess I’d be an okay fit, maybe,” Deec said nonchalantly, running his fingers through his reasonably clean hair.

“It’d be alright to be accepted, but I’m not too bothered about it, to be sort of honest,” he added before sauntering at a mild pace into his remedial biology class.

Corporate sponsorship hits university campus

Failing Gondolas
SENIOR LOGO-IST • @UPASSBRO

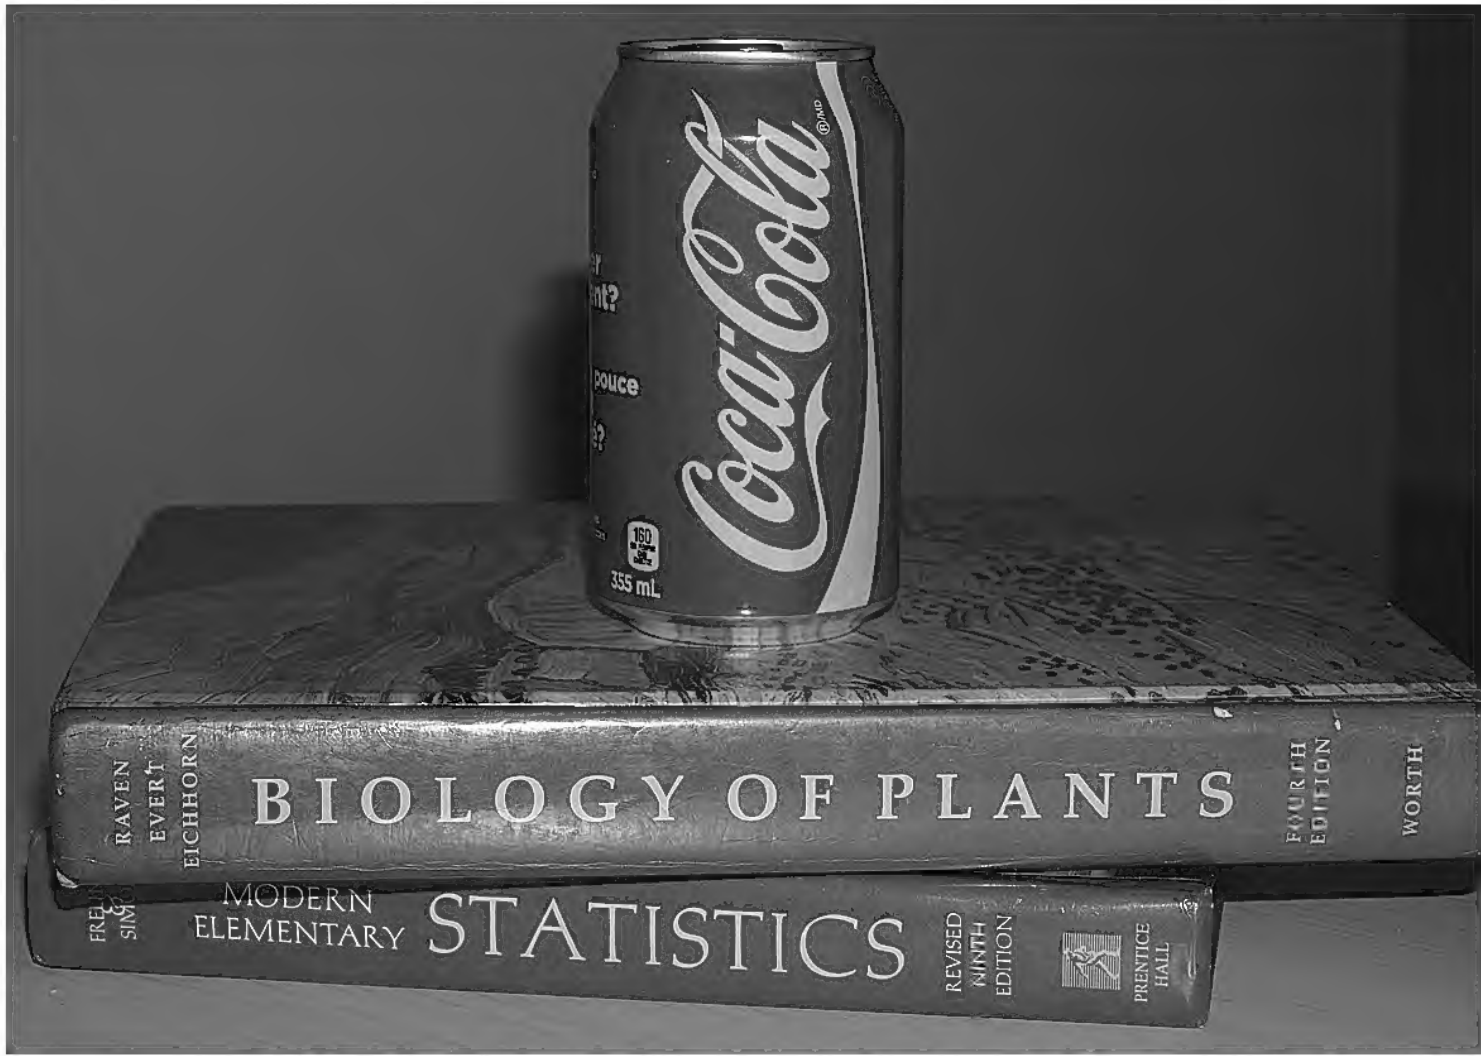

The campus formerly known as the University of Alberta has been taken by storm with the recently unveiled Make the U YOURS initiative — a program facilitating increased corporate sponsorship on campus.

The program was implemented by the newly titled U of A CEO Indiana Sammamama as one of the university’s latest revenue generation strategies.

“It is through finding our shared goals and hidden synergies that we can find an integrated, market-oriented, people-centric, empowering, sustainable way towards the future,” Sammamama said to a crowd of eager investors outside the brand new Coca-Cola School of Business on the rechristened EPCOR University of Alberta campus.

“Tasked with eliminating the constant deficits brought upon by an outdated model, the Make the U YOURS initiative seeks to bring the real world into the campus community by strategically incorporating corporate sensibilities and opportunities into education.”

Sammamama spoke at length about the myriad of new innovative education investments brought upon by the new initiative. This, combined with the rechristening of old infrastructures such as Convocation hall and the old SUB cafeteria

JIZZLE SPAWNSHIELD

— now the Shaw X-TREME Convocation Colosseum and Aramark Delicious Wonderland — demonstrate the unparalleled possibility and success of the initiative, Sammamama said.

Furthermore, Sammamama announced the launching of 30-second ads to be presented before each class.

But not everyone is pleased with this new direction the university is taking, particularly the newly instituted Tim Horton’s Students’ Union.

“The university is selling out. What’s next? Micro-transactions and outsourcing for our grading?” President Tetris Bluesclues said in one of his characteristic Inexorable Ragefits™.

“They said these budget cuts wouldn’t happen on the backs of students, but just look at what they’ve done!” Bluesclues added, pointing at the logo-clad back of a passing student.

But it’s not just the Tim Horton’s SU kicking up all the fuss. Ivanna Teachutings, a recently downsized professor from the Cirque Du Soleil Faculty of Arts and Acrobatic Excellence who found her old position as a political science lecturer made redundant by the recent changes, said the sponsorship is a black stain on the institution’s academic freedom.

“This is just shameful,” she said, shaking her head outside the new Taco Time Tory lecture theatres before heading inside.

“What has this post-secondary sector come to?”

Teachutings’ sentiments and other students’ and faculty members’ reservations were addressed early Tuesday morning by CEO Sammamama during the official ribbon-cutting ceremony for the new Xbox ONE Faculty Funhouse.

“It’s always difficult at first to bring change to entrenched practices and cultures who reflexively cling to a romanticized past, but I believe the Alberta Premier Alligator Redsword and I have found an innovative and exciting new funding opportunity that will bring shared prosperity to all” she said.

Sammamama spoke enthusiastically about the boundless possibilities of the initiative, where prospective partners for excellence in education may finally have a meaningful say in bringing education to suit the needs of the next century.

“These changes foster the elimination of inefficiency and the increase of the level of performance and integration among all the economic participants and stakeholders in post-secondary education — the most valuable investment anyone can make,” she said.

“This initiative will preserve the wealth-laden future of Alberta leadership for centuries to come.”

SHIT PITZ • CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Samosas said the Avon Christmas lineup has some great treats to relax with or to gift to a special someone this holiday season. With scents like “Outspoken Intensity” and “Sassy Iris” in bubble baths and rollerball eau de toilette fragrances, Samosas adds that supporting the university “has never smelled so sweet.”

▪ “My children, we really need your support, but I swear to god everything is going to be fine.”

ENDEARING SAMOSAS
LYING 2 U

But if sensual floral-scented limbs just aren’t your jam, Samosas said there’s plenty more ways to help out your alma mater. Samosas is holding PartyLite parties in SUB every day for the next month, and will be hosting a Tupperware get-together “if people are still into that shit.”

As a last resort, Samosas said she’d be thrilled if people checked out the university’s Kickstarter. But everything will be just fine, she promises.

“My children, we really need your support, but I swear to God everything is going to be fine,” she whispered, glancing over the pit of fecal carnage in Quad.

“I don’t think I can hold it any longer,” wept Shrimp.

BATTLE ROYALE BLOODBATH One student meets a bloody death via lethal stapler in the campus-wide competition. K-DAWG SHART

U of A implements Battle Royale death matches for bad students

Flailing Gonads
DOYERNADS HANGLOW ▪ @DOTHEYWOBBLETOANDFRO

An embattled U of A beset by funding cuts, employee severances and unpopular tuition increases has taken the fight to the next level with a brand new initiative to cut expenditures by weeding out the university's top underperforming students. For three weeks, 300 of the U of A's worst students will participate in a Battle Royale-style fight to the death to determine which of them will be fortunate enough to continue their studies, and which will meet a gruesome and untimely death.

▪ “This was truly an eye-opener about the value of my education.”

NANSEE BLACKOUT
EYELESS CRETIN

“This is great. It's so great! Man, I got a stapler. A stapler!” exclaimed Joe Subpar, one of the lucky participants, before fleeing from his classmates into the bowels of CCIS. “One of the international students got a knife and I get a blessed stapler,” he screamed across the atrium. This past summer, the financial situation was looking dire for the U of A, and students, faculty and staff alike were certain the university was on course for a disastrous ending to 2013. But one stroke of genius birthed by U of A President Indie S-dawg managed to turn things around just in time for the holidays. Her diligent and extensive research of late night documentaries and her boundless courage in the face of adversity yielded the monumental task of implementing the Underperformer Purgation Strategy (UPS), now in a pilot project deployed across this hellscape of a university campus. “I was watching this documentary on HBO when the idea came to me. You know, the one about some kids competing with each other for their lives on a lovely island,” S-dawg explained. “I realized that to move forward, we needed to bring everyone on board. To give our worst something to strive for and aim towards! That's how UPS was born — it's a way for underperforming students to meet each other, focus, and really take their lives and futures into their own violent hands.” That is how Subpar and 299 of his lazy, underachieving peers as determined by GPA, were selected from all of the available programs to be given this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. For the sole winner, this will mean escaping with his or her life and gaining access to the exclusive survivors circle, complete with early course registration and a $15 gift card for any off-campus chain food venue. But everything is fun and games until someone loses an eye, as demonstrated by Nansee Blackout, a third-year pre-med student who lost her left eye in the early stages of the competition due to an extreme scissor fight with a pre-law undergrad. “This was a true eye-opener about the value of my education,” she said while bleeding profusely. She added that were it not for her quick thinking and playing dead at the right moment, she might have lost more than that. To prospective participants she has a few words of advice: “The pen is actually not that much mightier than the sword. “Go for the sword, always. Or a gun. That's good too.”

Beloved campus puppy therapy axed, bitchy kittens build more character

Felon Quityellin
HOWDO YOUSAY ▪ @HERLASTNAMEANYWAY?

In an effort to kill the widespread sense of joy on campus, the University of Alberta administration is shaking up its intensely popular Furry Friends puppy therapy sessions, and will be replacing it with cat therapy instead. The change was announced shortly after Dean of Students Franklin Robinsizzle expressed his intense dislike for students' happiness after getting to pet the therapy dogs. According to one of his staff members who asked not to be named, Robinsizzle frequently voiced complaints about “those awful student creatures,” and their happy exclamations at what should be their most stressful and joyless time of year. When asked why he picked cats instead of dogs, Robinsizzle explained that cats help build character, while dogs simply foster useless feelings of delight and content. “I grew up on a farm with barn cats who barely tolerated my presence and kept us up all night with scat songs about everyone wanting to be a cat. It was terrible. They helped make me the complete badass I am

SUPPLIED BY YO MAMA!

today,” Robinsizzle said. To ensure students don't get too overstimulated by a room full of soft, fluffy kittens, Robinsizzle's office has arranged for all the cats in the program to be jaded, adult cats who refuse to acknowledge any type of toy dangled in front of them. The cats will respond to all expressions of human affection with apathy, boredom and the occasional scratch, and will purr only when students cry. “We felt it was important to make sure we didn't run into the same issue with cats as we did with the dogs,” Robinsizzle noted. “If students were just getting excited, we might have had to cancel the program entirely.” Robinsizzle said he hopes the changes to the Furry Friends program benefits students, and admitted it was a mistake letting them get overly excited playing with affectionate dogs these last few years. “The change to cats will still give them a chance to interact with animals, but should keep their excitement levels manageable,” he said. “God knows they need less pleasure in their lives.”

ALUMNI ASKED & ANSWERED with Wunhorse Openslea

'76 BA(Criminology)

Current Occupation:
Scout Elf (a.k.a. Elf on a Shelf)

What do you miss most about being a U of A student?
I miss spending time with my elf buddies on campus. You'd be surprised how many elves there are at the U of A — we tend to blend in against all that green and gold.

Favourite campus memory?
Drinking a few too many rum-and-eggnogs at a holiday party and streaking through Quad to impress a girl. Unfortunately, the cold weather didn't do me any favours. Needless to say, said girl was not impressed.

What's the one piece of advice you'd give a current U of A student?
Leggings are not pants — unless you're an elf.

Best procrastination activity?
People watching. List making.

Favourite course/professor?
Sociology of Deviance and Conformity. I discovered a love of studying people and developed a critical perspective for analyzing the differences between naughty and nice.

Favourite Secret Makeout Spot?
Let's just say that every shelf I sit on reminds me of Belle Sonbobaes and the stacks in Rutherford Library. Sigh.

What did you do to help you stay sane during exam time?
Binged on candy canes and cookies.

If you got one university do over, what would it be?
I should have taken dentistry. All those cookies and candies ... I'd be rich!

alumni.ualberta.ca/students

UNIVERSITY OF ALBERTA
ALUMNI

Things

Thing Maker
The Maker
Electronics
nobodyusesthis@dontcontact.me

Phone
Don't
Twats
Where it's @

Unpaid labour
You seriously don't want to.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Canadian politics could use a few more crack smokers

IN THE IMMORTAL WORDS OF ONE ANDREW FETTERLY WILKES-Krier, “Party tip: party,” and “When it’s time to party, we will party hard.”

No scholar before him has ever brought more awareness to the plight of partying than beloved hero. Andrew W.K., as he’s set an example we all should follow. Too often citizens try and speak ill of the hard partying lifestyle, saying such choices are unhealthy and unfit for our impressionable youth. But we need to stop shielding our children from the joys of partying and all of the riches and good times they’ll experience if they can only learn to party just hard enough. More importantly, we need to stop shielding ourselves from the enlightenment partying will bring to us.

One man has exemplified this partying spirit and the uplifting feeling it can bring to one’s life, and has tragically received nothing but ridicule for it. That man is obviously Rob Muthafuckin’ Ford.

With all of the criticism he’s received this year and all of the hate that’s rained down upon him, people might get the idea that a hard partyer like Ford isn’t fit to run a city and act as a role model for kids. All of a sudden, society has arbitrarily decided that crack cocaine is a bad thing now. Yet, Stephen Harper can drink a beer while Prime Minister and no one bats an eye. It’s this kind of double standard that does nothing but confuse the nation about what should be viewed as proper partying.

One beer is a half measure, a nice attempt at partying, but one that displays a complete lack of commitment to the liquor. Rob M.F. Ford Esq., however, goes all the way with his commitment to good times, and at the end of the day, what kind of harm can crack really do to our political leaders? Potential symptoms include euphoria, supreme confidence and increased energy and alertness. I don’t know about you, hypothetical reader, but a euphoric, supremely confident and alert leader sounds like someone I want representing me.

Heck, if world leaders would just loosen up and do a smidge of crack — or heroin, coke, MDMA, acid, mushrooms, a gallon of PCP, we’re not here to judge — maybe they’d loosen up a bit, chill the fuck out and we could finally put an end to conflict around the world. If the world was just run by drug addicts, ravers and political leaders emulating their college days of youthful fraternity hazing and partying, we would undoubtedly all live in a happier, better place.

After all, once you get too strung out on drugs, who really has the energy to start an argument, let alone a war? Not to mention that if politicians met more frequently with the seedy underbellies of their respective cities, they’d get to know their underprivileged constituents better. Plus, by buying drugs, they’re giving money right back to their local economies.

Like I said before though, if you really want to party hard, you don’t need to stick to old-fashioned crack. Pop that thun thun thun, politicians, rave it up and experience partying amongst your people. What better way to get to know someone, after all, than sweatily grinding up against them and bonding over those craaaaazy feelings and chewed up bottom lips you both have right now, before breaking into a serious discussion on the pros and cons of sending foreign aid to third world countries?

While everyone knows our Lord and Saviour Andrew W.K. doesn’t do any drugs or drink alcohol himself, we must take the lessons of partying he’s preached to us and see it to its logical end. And we can only do that led by our greatest civic, national and world leaders partyin’ ‘til they puke and uncovering a plan for world peace that they hopefully will remember tomorrow when the hallucinogenic effects wear off.

Ford could be our leader into a new dawn across the world. It’s time we follow his lead.

AJ
FORMER BACKSTREET BOY

EDITORIAL POEM

Things are different now

Our paper is different
That much is true
But have no fear
No need to be blue

It’s all in good fun
This thing is a joke
Don’t send angry letters
Be a nice bloke

D-Rop
POET LAUREATE

DARCY FUCKING ROPCHAN

letters to the editor

Fuck the SU, they don't do shit for me

Yeah, I just want to start off this letter by saying as I sit here in SUB drinking my coffee from The Daily Grind, I realize the Students’ Union hasn’t done shit for me in the two years I’ve been on campus, and I’m sick and tired of it.

Do you know how much my parents pay for me to go to school here? I don’t, but I’m sure it’s a lot. I don’t think they’d appreciate paying for nothing.

Universities in Alberta are getting their budgets slashed and the SU has done nothing to stop it. Why cant they just tell the government to not cut funding and be done with it? It’s really not that hard. Maybe I should run for president. I know how to stand up to the government — I am minoring in Political Science, after all.

Another thing I don’t like about the SU is that in addition to the plethora of events we already have, there are still not enough events to make me feel engaged on campus. We should be having some kind of a party every night on campus. That’s the only way we can make students feel included.

Also, it’s always so cold outside and the SU has done nothing to address this. Can you believe this gross mis-carriage of democracy? When will the SU learn that I want to be warm, but not too warm. Cool, but not cold. I want to be able to wear a nice, light jacket at all times.

I suppose I could do something about it. If I really wanted to, I could run for an SU executive position and try and change things from the inside, But you know what? I don’t want to. I’d much rather sit here and complain in a letter

Fuck you SU. You don’t do shit for me.

A concerned student
VIA SNAPCHAT

Student enters butt with own civil union

Guys, I’m here to tell you about fluoride in our water. It’s a real issue and we totally need to revolt against it.

You may not have known this, but big dentistry is in cahoots with the government to put fluoride in our water in some evil attempt to make our teeth cleaner.

We need to rise up against this tyranny. If I want my teeth to be yellow and dirty, that’s my choice. No government fatcat is going to get his dirty paws on my water.

Avery Bignob
VIA FRIENDSTER

Cheap shit for sale

First off, I know this is the letters section and it should be reserved for sharp, biting commentary on articles printed in The Getaway, but I have to tell you about something exciting.

I am selling my old Winnebago. It’s a 1987 and it only has about 450,000 kms on it. It’s practically brand new.

Once again, I realize this is the letters section and I know you’re totally just going to delete this email as soon as you read it, but it would be really nice if you just printed it.

Once again, I don’t understand the concept of classified ads or Craigslist, so if you could just print this ad for this pointless piece of shit I’m selling, that would be wonderful.

Seller
ARTS IV

Letters to the editor should be sent to letters@getaway.ualberta.ca . Not the opinion email. Serously, the email address is right fucking there.

The Getaway reserves the right to edit letters for length and clarity, and other stuff and things. Any letter it deems racist, sexist, libellous or otherwise hateful in nature is not getting printed. Please keep your racism to yourself. The Getaway also reserves the right to publish letters online.

Letters to the editor should be no longer than 350 words, and should include the author’s name, program, year of study, and student ID number to be considered for publication.

Is this a joke issue or is it perhaps the truest thing we’ve ever done? I know we like to laugh and we’re known for our razor sharp sense of humour, however, this isn’t really a joke.

In fact, it’s quite the opposite. The issue you’re reading is an intimate look into our souls. The articles may seem funny and you may even have a few laughs, but we are not joking. We at The Getaway are some of the most miserable pricks you’ll ever meet and this “joke” issue is a great way to vent all of the frustrations that have built up over the course of the year.

So sit back, relax and have a few guffaws. Just know though, that these jokes are at your expense. You did this. You created this. Stare into the joke abyss and see it staring right back at you. Things are about to get weird.

FROM THE SUPPLY

Debating the sex appeal of vaginal juices

I’m a man and I couldn’t make a girl squirt to save my life

Mandrea Flozz
PUNT

Squirting disgusts me. I can’t keep squeegeeing my room from top to bottom and it’s totally ruined my computer screen. It’s also sticky and really hard to get out of your hair. Ladies have shorted out my electronics, stained my carpet and now my mom says my room smells like a Prince George brothel. I dream of the day I no longer have to wear goggles into the bedroom, and water wings to stay afloat in your throes of passion. Plus, it’s totally gross and it looks like pee — I shouldn’t have to swallow that stuff.

■ Squirting is fucking gross. How would you like it if I just pissed all over you randomly? It wouldn’t feel very nice at all. Also, vaginas are incredibly confusing.

Wet, smelly sheets aren’t worth your two seconds of ecstasy. Never mind the three and half hours it takes to me get an erection. How can I be sure that isn’t pee? The effort it takes to wash my soaking sheets of your feminine projectile never makes up for the effort it takes to get you off. How am I supposed to roll over and go to sleep immediately after I cum if my sheets are soaked with the messy by-products of sex? Oh, you think your rocketing ejaculate is sexy? Not when that warm liquid is oozing down my face as you writhe around uncontrollably. Sleeping in your wet spot is like laying on the cold, wet streets of a humid third world country as I shiver myself into an unsatisfying slumber. Use some towels, you say? Great, you’ve now robbed me of the right to be comfortable and dry upon exiting my shower. You’ve left me cold and lonely as you doze off in bliss. Take it as a compliment? Sure, but would you like a compliment that sprays you in the face after it’s given? And no, blowjobs are not the same thing.

Why can’t we make love while staying clean and dry? It’s not rocket science. I know I said I wanted to get my dick wet, but just not that wet. You keep your fluids to yourself and I will keep mine. I’ll be harpooning whales in my own bedroom if this continues. Your vulva entices me like an Arby’s roast beef sandwich, but please hold the extra cheese. I risk drowning when I’m with you, and I fear for my safety. A snorkel is not an option. When will women learn that it’s only okay for men to be gross during sex. I couldn’t give less of a shit what you think about my semen, but keep your gross ejaculate to yourself.

Female ejaculation is the sexiest thing to do in the bedroom

Bate Klack
CUNT PUNT

Cum here and let me tell you a lil secret. When the stars align, I spout like the goddamn fountains in front of the Bellagio hotel. Yup, you heard me. I’m a squirter. But I’ve been hearing some rumours, y’all. It’s like people don’t want to sip from my sweet, sweet feminine fluids like my vulva is a water fountain in a mall. People are hating on squirters and that just isn’t cool. Squirt-ing is the bees’ knees. People will watch porn stars emit enough fluids to fill a Rubbermaid bin and not get weird about it. But as soon as you start talking about squirting in public people get shady and pretend it’s not the god-given blessing that it is. Even porn stars look a little freaked out when they’re doing it too.

And you know what? I get it. I’d be a tad spooked too if someone shoved a Super Soaker in my face when I was expecting a dollar store water pistol. Nobody wants to pretend that they enjoy getting peed on the face. And that’s okay. But open up wide, because I’m going to make you want sexy vaginal fluids clinging to the spindles of your beard hair.

I can tell you that I can love you by using my words. Or, I can tell you that I love you all over your face, mattress and bedroom wall. People often ask me “How?” “Why?” “Will my partner think I’m strange?” “Is it pee?”

■ I squirt so much that I could drown the entire Greek army from the movie 300. You could swim laps in my juices.

To all these queries, I say nay. Nay to the misconception that squirting is unholy and vile. Nay to the haters getting down on my flow, literally. And no, it’s not pee. My urethra is jealous of my lady parts for excreting a fluid more precious and beloved than its salty urine brother. Worried about ruining your sheets? You can buy more. Bedding is temporary, but the memories of hot and saucy bodily fluids dripping down your face will last you a lifetime. It’s also such a double standard that men can just jizz all over everything and no one bats an eyelash. If a girl squirts just a little, it’s considered weird and exotic. So come here and wade in my lady waters, and I’ll show you all the wonders of squirting. It only takes two to tango the female ejaculation dance. Two fingers, that is.

“It’s sexist!”

“It’s vile!”

Tom Spanks is Forrest Hump

At the Porneau the day after Festivus!

“Mama always said life was like a box of chocolates. You never know what you’ll stick your dick into next.”

I regret everything bad I've ever said about old people

Achey Loloa
AN ELDERLY

Remember that joke article I wrote 52 years ago about mature students being a nuisance? I thought I was being funny. I thought you'd have to be an absolute grade-A dipshit not to realize that I was making a joke and it was all in good fun. But I was dead wrong — I shouldn't have been making jokes like that. At the tender age of 73, I now realize that there's absolutely nothing wrong with old people. Everything wrong with society and the world in general can actually be blamed on young people. And by young people, I mean anyone under the age of 47.

I'm sick and tired of young people in my classes (I'm currently working towards a third degree in Sociology). Higher education is the domain of the elderly, not the acne-ridden high school graduate. This is no place for people who are new to life. The U of A should be for those who have survived the trials of being on this earth during the Great War of 2030. Boy, that was a truly awful war.

The difference between seniors like myself and those damn kids that make up most of my classes is pretty damn obvious. The elderly are wiser scholars, like Yoda. Remember Star Wars? We can also hold our liquor way better than you. Unlike my youthful classmates, I don't become sopping drunk after two Palm Bays and a tequila shot. It would take a staggering amount of Edmonton's finest ale to reduce my faculties to those of the drink-sodden teens who flank me in the seats of Tory Lecture.

▪ My ass is like wine — it gets better with age. These stupid youngsters should just step aside and let the elderly have their day in the sun. Being old is fucking where it's at.

The cultural barrier is also a big problem, especially when I try to talk to my peers. Young people are always communicating telepathically — because we can do that here in the year 2065. It's just so cold and impersonal. They never take the time to slow down and communicate the old fashioned way — through Internet memes and gifs. Ah, remember gifs? They don't make 'em like they used to. I tried to make a Bad Luck Brian reference the other day and no one knew what I was talking about. I mean, nobody knew what I was talking about when I made those references back in my day either, but my point still stands.

This new generation takes a university education for granted, and they expect a whole slew of luxuries they associate with the student lifestyle. Many of them don't work, instead spending most of their entire weekends twerking or tweaking. When I was their age, I worked no jobs, had a cell phone and was lucky if I could illegally download and watch three movies a week. My parents paid for my data plan. Kids these days will never know what that feel likes.

YOU'LL NEVER BE AS COOL AS ME Look at me! I'm an old person smoking — so cool.

PHOTO TAKER THE KEVSTER

If only I could go back in time and prevent myself from being young.

But alas, we haven't perfected time travel yet here in the year 2065. We're close, though.

So next time the toddlers in my sociology lecture try to complain about being here at 8 a.m., I'll remind them that I'm here at 75 and goddamn it, I've been up since 4:30 a.m. this morning. These babies clearly aren't ready for the university experience. Step aside and let me sit down. My feet hurt.

WING WEDNESDAYS

WWW.SQUIRESPUB.CA

$7 UNLIMITED WINGS

$4 KOKANEE PINTS

Farts n' Shit

sexual intercourse
Page 21

Giant Orgy

Presented by Sex Fiendz Student Group
Quad
Erryday all day
BYOL (bring-your-own-lube)

A new student group on campus has solved the eternal issue of just wanting to fuck all the time: all-day group orgies. The group won this year's Heroes for Health contest with their submission of a video of students happily 69ing instead of studying, which finally convinced the administration that orgasms are actually all students need to be happy. The group recommends that those interested in joining for winter bring a blanket and an open mind.

International Student Butt-Touching Day

Riverside Lounge, HUB mall
Thursdays at 7 p.m.

Join in global butt-touching day! Wait ... what'd you think we meant? That the administration, feeling bad about raising international student tuition, decided to host a butt-touching seminar for international students unfamiliar with the North American practice of rimming? That'd be craziness. Nah. This is just a big party of consensual butt-touching in HUB. Come join!

Lemon Party ft. Profs

Wednesdays at 4 p.m.
Deweys (the old Powerplant or something)

The SU executives recently revealed that their semester of "60 hour work weeks" has sparked the idea for a new undergraduate service to help connect horny students with hot profs. Using the ratemyprof.com "chili pepper rating" system, the execs compiled a list of the hottest profs — primarily DILFs and MILFs — and contacted them to gauge their interest in hosting events based on the popular Lemon Party website. Interested students can visit ualbertalemonparty.com for more info.

Asexual Orgy

Sexerdays at 14 p.m.
Kiva Room, Education
Free

Feeling left out by the recent rising trend of sex events on campus, the Asexual Students Society revealed their presence on campus, inviting others of the no-sex persuasion to join them at weekly "orgies" where they drink kombucha and watch porn. Though it seems weird, the group claims that laughing at how stupid naked bodies look writhing around is a primary source of fun and laughter for those who prefer to pass on sex.

'Berta Pride: The Cowgirl and Reverse Cowgirl Reception

Saturdoozy, Decendah 17, 2013
Agriculture-Forestry building
Admission costs all of your money because this is the BEST bar event the year, they say

The ALES department recently announced the addition of the "The Cowgirl and Reverse Cowgirl Reception" to the popular annual BarNone event. Joining in on all the sexual fun occurring on campus, the department decided to host a sex night related to country music and rodeo culture, choosing to host a party where couples can separate off into private rooms and practice their best "Yee-haws!"

A BABY'S HEAD ON A COCAINE ADDICT'S BODY Rubby Fjord on his way to Arby's! Sneak attack!

SUPPLIED: VOYEURS INC

Moronto mayor Rubby Fjord reveals extent of coke snorting on Intervention

TELEVISION REVELATION

Intervention: Rubby Fjord

STARRING > Rubby Fjord
SPONSORED BY > Douglas Fjord
AIRING > Christmas Eve at rubbyfjord.tumblr.com

Sperm Mildew
FARTS STAFF SLAVE

This week's episode of Intervention, featuring Moronto's controversial shitty, err ... city leader, Rubby Fjord, promises to provide novel insight into the challenges of managing a snow-swept metropolis of 2.5 million people while simultaneously sweeping 2.5 thousand milligrams of snow into one's metabolic system.

Fjord agreed to participate in the episode under the impression that it was a documentary aimed towards mending his recently disparaged PR. Yet, rather than attempt to downplay his drug-use, Fjord frequently and unabashedly is caught lighting up for the greater half of the episode. Determined to prove how one of such high position can function in such a high position, Fjord totes and totes the benign nature of his habit and his own abilities to make mature decisions while on drugs.

"It feels as if I'm walking on sunshine," the newly-elected mayor of Moronto says as the show opens, through a plume of rock-cocaine vapour accompanying his exhale.

"You know, I'm not all about that pussy, 'I may have smoked but did not inhale' shit," he continues. "I'm not afraid to admit my faults, you know, I'm just an ordinary huma — shit, I dropped my lighter... Terry, did you see where it went? Aw, fuck."

After doing a few bong-rips and five to six lines of "premium shit" off his vehicle's dashboard, Fjord makes the poignant statement: "For all intensive purposes, you know, drugs are just a way to unwind from the stress of any job; whether you're a race car driver, a taxidermist or a — what's that job called where you have to jerk off horses? An equestrian? Well, I'm a questrian too, you know, on a quest to prove that procreational drug use shouldn't be so stigmata in today's society."

But as with most episodes of Intervention, the drama truly unfolds when the time for an intervention arrives.

Told he was simply going on a McDonalds run, Fjord's adopted brother Douglas and the documentary crew shepherd him into an Arby's parking lot. To his immediate dismay, Ford bolts out the vehicle, tripping over a woman and her infant child in the process. His brother and the crew catch up quickly, and find Ford panting, red-faced on a nearby picnic bench.

"I hate Arby's!" Fjord exclaims, as Douglas desperately tries to convince his brother to come inside.

"I have plenty to eat at home," Fjord retorts.

After the startled politician settles, his brother explains that there are a bunch of people inside of Arby's that just love the heck out of him, and have organized an intervention in hopes he can change his dangerous lifestyle. Fjord inquires with: "Aren't those the things where they cut the tips off little Jewish babies' penises?"

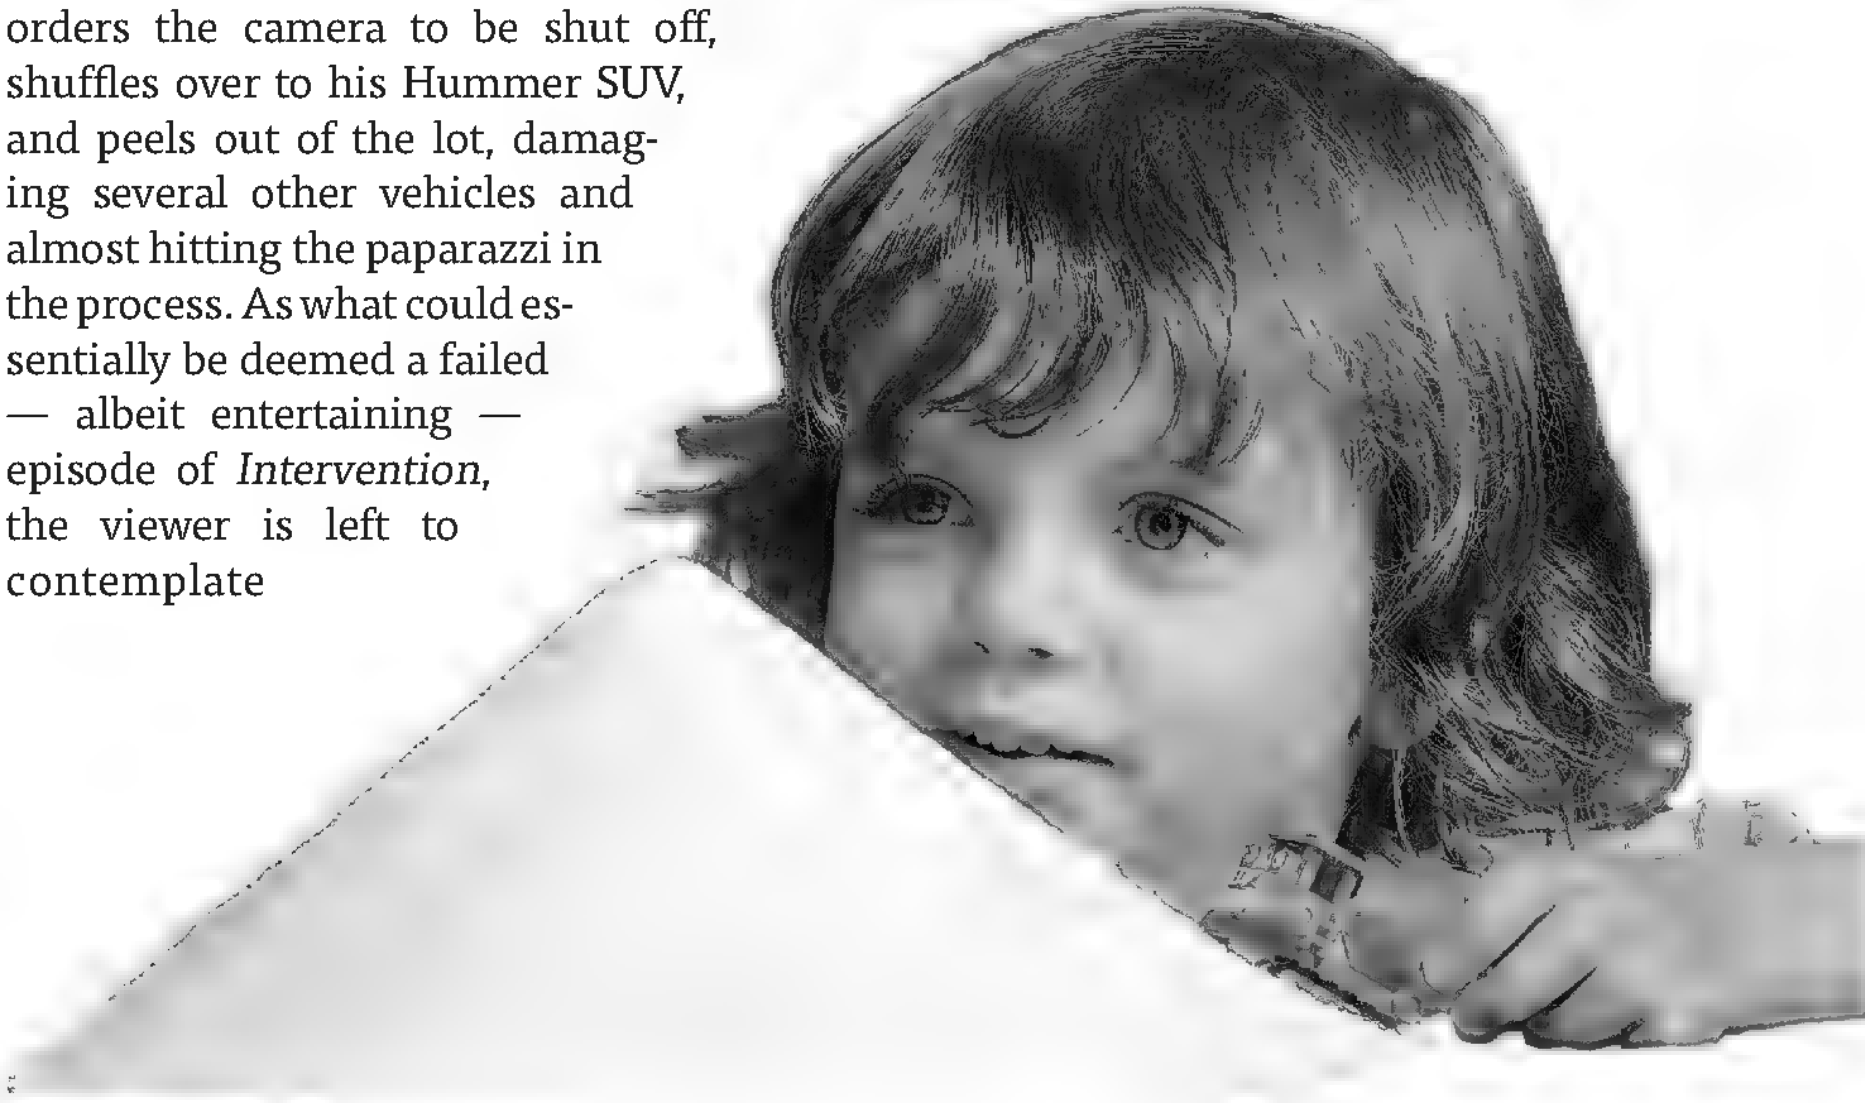

After corrected, Fjord vehemently orders the camera to be shut off, shuffles over to his Hummer SUV, and peels out of the lot, damaging several other vehicles and almost hitting the paparazzi in the process. As what could essentially be deemed a failed — albeit entertaining — episode of Intervention, the viewer is left to contemplate some of Fjord's sentiments.

■ "For all intensive purposes, you know, drugs are just a way to unwind from the stress of any job; whether you're a race car driver, a taxidermist or a — what's that job called where you have to jerk off horses?"

RUBBY FJORD
MAYOR OF MORONTO

Barring addiction as an obvious caveat, could it be considered okay to smoke a little crack after a long day of work? It's well-known that a glass of red wine a day can prove a healthy practice; could we reach the same conclusion with the devil's dandruff? Could heroine be your heroine from a totalitarian boss? Could ecstasy excise the back pain from labouring over a machine at your 50 hours a week "nine to five" job? Well, one thing is for certain: the vigilant, educated citizens of Moronto elected a mayor that believes it can.

Because Edmonton didn't have enough musical festivals already

FUCKING MUSIC PREVW

Apocalypse Snow Music Festival

WITH > bands n' shit

WHEN > Jan. 21 n' shit, at shit o'clock

WHERE > dive bars n' shit

HOW MUCH > free, or whatever

Kevvster Shankster

CAMERA NERD • @KEVVYSTAR777

Yet another fucking indie music festival is "taking over" Edmonton. Guys with guitars who think they're musicians and girls who want attention will descend on Edmonton's dive bars for the first annual Apocalypse Snow festival in January. Festival organizer Jasper Peterson created the festival when he realized that there just weren't enough indie rock festivals to accommodate all of the Edmontonian bands playing out of their mom's garages.

"Edmonton just has so many shitty bands that think they can make the big time. We just need to promote them," he says. "I mean, we only really have six or seven indie rock festivals, but Edmonton is bigger than that. The duos with only a drum machine and a guitarist that play only power chords just aren't going to make it unless we host at least 10 more festivals each year. I want to start the trend, and Edmonton is, after all, the place to make something."

"I saw that there are a ton of musicians playing bars every weekend anyways, so I figured why not make a festival out of it? It's going to be very organic. We don't want anyone feeling intimidated or left out."

JASPER PETERSON
FESTIVAL FIRE STARTER

The lineup is currently mostly local, with acts such as Pomegranate Opposum, a brother and sister duo that play theremins, and Mskmkrrpl, whose songs' lyrics don't have any vowels. The lineup isn't set in stone, though; Peterson acknowledges that some of these bands might break up within the month. He hopes that seniors in the suburbs and infants will be exposed to new local artists, and is thus making the festival entirely free.

JUST 'CAUSE You and all the hipsters are even allowed to sing "All Star"

KOOLKAT SHIVER

"I saw that there are a ton of musicians playing in bars every weekend anyways, so I figured why not make a festival out of it?" he says. "It's going to be very organic. We don't want anyone feeling intimidated or left out."

Peterson believes the festival may even lose money, as he's unwilling to seek out any corporate sponsorship because he doesn't believe in running a for-profit company. Instead, all money will be made by selling t-shirts, passing around a hat after shows and selling the posters

Peterson made on a pirated copy of Photoshop five minutes before they went to print.

"We're putting up the posters and then the musicians have to do the rest of the work, planning their shows and doing their own sound check. But this is going to look great on my resume when I try to get a real job in five or 10 years."

The Apocalypse Snow Festival is forecasted for Jan. 21 and will run until "we're done," Petersen explains. You can find out more at apocalypsesnow2014.tumblr.com. There will be at least six bands playing, depending on who's playing at the bars that day, and the headlining act will be some lame band from the late '90s that everyone forgot exists.

ALUMNI ASKED & ANSWERED

with

Mitch
"Nine Toes"
O'Flaherty

'87 BA

Current Occupation:

Vagrant and ex-owner of Power-Clips Toenail Cutterz™ Inc.

What do you miss most about being a U of A student?

The warm buildings. Once I lived in Rutherford North for 8 weeks before being found out by an overzealous Law student.

If you got one university do-over, what would it be?

Not majored in Film Studies, maybe?

What did you learn at the U of A that applies in your life right now?

That L'Express is the best place to get wraps if SUB is hectic and you have deep pockets.

UNIVERSITY OF ALBERTA
ALUMNI

vino bitchez

WRITTEN BY Peepee Whoresak

Boones Strawberry

Supplier: like ... liquor stores?

Available at: like ... liquor stores?

So like ... they told me to write this column, because like I re-tweet alot of those someecards about drinking wine. Do you know the ones I mean? Like... "My heads says go to the gym, but my heart says drink more wine." Aren't they great? But, like, if I'm honest, I don't drink wine. It's gross. But, whatever. They told me to review this wine called a Cabinet Sovereign?

But oh my god, I totally got hit on by this guy at the liquor store, he was totally scruffy and toothless ... wait, he might have been homeless ... Anyway, the wine was gross. I do not recommend cabinet wines. They taste like wood. And acid. What I can recommend though is Boones! It was on the other shelf with the Bacardi, but it's in a wine bottle, so it's waaay classier. It has a pretty label too. It tastes like candy, which is like, the only reason to drink alcohol. Or to pretend you're drunk. Anyways. You should get it. And pair it with like, vegetables or something.

GLITTERY PEENS Because dudes were feeling left out by all the fabulous labia of the world. SNICKERDOODLE SCHENK

“Dick” the halls this Christmas with new gadgets for glittering genitals

PRODUCT PREVIEW

Dick Dazzlers

AVAILABLE AT Starting (Time)
WEBSITE penisjewels.angelfire.com

Big Black Dick
PENIS ENTHUSIAST @FINDMEONOKCUPID

If your penis looks like a dying egg-plant, have no fear — Dick Dazzlers are here.

124 St.’s newest bustling business, Dick Dazzlers, is offering a solution for any bro who wants his private parts to look and feel more like a festive Christmas tree than a saggy mass of skin and self-consciousness: stick-on jewels for male members only.

Denise Warmpants, Dick Dazzlers’ founder and owner, has always had “a passion for the D,” she says. Her inspiration to glam up the saddest gonads in the city, though, came from one partner’s particularly depressing peen.

“It just stared at me,” she whispers. “So I draped a necklace over it and got back down to business. They say diamonds are a girl’s best friend, after all.”

What started as a move to dress up an intimidating organ has swelled to become one of the hottest boutiques in the city. The modest-sized storefront is jam-packed with adhesive rhinestones that Warmpants says are perfect to “just slap right on down there.”

For bros who aren’t yet snug enough in their masculinity to dip into a glittery deep-v digger, they can opt for a studded dick as well. Industrial metal studded patterns such as “Gravedigger” and “Meatgrinder” will make a perfect gift for your boo who wants all the glam of Dick Daz-zling without sacrificing the brute strength of his manhood.

Uhmad Bro, a total dude, just got his dick all glammed-out in the tough-yet-chic Meatgrinder option. He can’t zip up his jeans all the way anymore, but he’s cool with it.

“It’s totally fine, because my yogurt gun looks like a rock star now,” he says, actually calling his penis a ‘yogurt gun.’

“The in-store complimentary application was pretty nice too. I mean, no homo though.”

Warmpants urges all men who want to get their dicks dazzled to come in for their own consultation. Because nothing is more fabulous than doing the dirty with a zirconia-encrusted scrotum.

“We just want to make penises better,” she says.

DOOR ROUTE: Describe what you’re wearing.

MR. D: I’m wearing a blue sombrero from Alexander McQueen. I stole from Julio’s Barrio on Whyte Avenue. I was really drunk and my friends dared to me to do it.

DOOR ROUTE: What defines your style?

MR. D: Honestly, I prefer to go fully nude when I’m streaking in public. I firmly believe there’s never a bad place to be naked. The only reason I’m wearing a hat over my junk is because it’s cold outside and I have an image to maintain.

eau évaluation

TROIS REVIEWS OF BOTTLED WATER BY Antoine Pigeau

NO NAME WATER

La Bouteille

If minimalism shit into a plastic mold, this bottle would be the result. Don’t be fooled by the wavy grip lines: this bottle will slip out of your hand faster than an arthritic’s bar of soap.

L’Eau

The water itself has a disappointing aroma, and notes of despair and bisphenol A linger on the tongue long after the last miserable swig. It does, however, fit almost all cup-holders.

JANA NATURAL ARTESAN WATER

La Bouteille

This bottle is a progressive yuppie’s wet dream: BPA-free glasstic hand-blown into a sensually curved cylinder that tapers elegantly into the tin-topped mouthpiece. Stunning.

L’Eau

Hand-pumped from the mountains of Norway, this water has a crisp tongue-feel but the a somewhat bland and predictable tongue-taste.

VOSS WATER

La Bouteille

This ultramodern glass bottle fits in the hand like a glove — a pristine, cyllindrical glove. It’s the pinnacle of water bottle design — like a love-child between Tom Ford and the late Steve Jobs.

L’Eau

Best served between 7° and 9° between 7 and 9 p.m., this scintil-lating eau de mode is the perfect way to suggest one’s wealth without breaking the bank.

Score:

Check out thegatewayonline.ca/fashionstreeters for more photos.

Schwartz

Schwartz
Brian
Phone
420

Email
weonlyhavetowinoneguys@getaway.ca
Twitter
@cantlosegamesyouhaventplayed

Volunteer
Haven't played football before! Great! Come tryout for the Bears!
#itcantgetanyorse

Getawaywriter defiant after costing team gold medal

NO SHOW Eve Bluesky, who refuses to show her face in this photo, is now accepting offers to determine the outcome of sporting events across the U of A campus. THE #FACELESSMEN

THE 2ND SOCCER RECAP

The national championship title that got away

Around a month or so ago ...
... in the T-Dot

Karma's a Pitch
TH3 B4DD35T U 3V3R 54W

It has oft been echoed that the power of the written word can have a profound, if not wonderous and devastating, impact on the human spirit and soul.

But although it was the University of Montreal Carabins who defeated the University of Alberta Pandas 2-0 in the CIS semifinals last month, it was actually Eve Bluesky — a third-year volunteer with The Getaway — and not any of the Pandas players on the pitch, who ultimately lost the national championship title for the Pandas before the tournament even began.

"They always say that the pen is mightier than the sword, but I never knew my words would have this much of an impact," Bluesky said when asked about last month's final. "If my writing can affect a team's play on the other side of the country, who knows what I could do? Maybe disarm Assad in Syria or stop all the cuts in the Faculty of Arts."

Bluesky's article — which first appeared in an issue of The Getaway the day following the Pandas' departure them the national championship tournament in Toronto — received a bit of flack from U of A soccer fans for predicting that the Pandas would not be bringing home the national championship based on their play on the field. But it was actually what Bluesky didn't write, and what she did, that prevented the Pandas from winning the gold.

Although Bluesky would later reiterate the fact that, "There's no crying in soccer!" to many of the Pandas soccer players who came to her with their obvious displeasure at her

Getaway article after returning from Toronto with their bronze medal, little did they know that it was actually the secret ritual that Bluesky performed, and not her writing, which contributed to their loss in Toronto.

"I kinda like this new power. I mean, I could single handedly be the reason why a team is or is not successful based on entirely on how I want them to play."

EVE BLUESKY
THE GETAWAY'S SORECEER-IN-CHIEF

"In the early hours of the morning, just after the Pandas had won their first game over the Laval Rouge et Or, I went to the middle of the North Saskatchewan River with my textbook from Latin 102 in one hand and a brightly lit candle in the other and just recited a bunch of lines from the book," Bluesky said. "I didn't even know what half the words meant or if I even got the pronunciation correct. All I wanted to do was make sure the Pandas never got to play for the CIS gold medal."

Coom Hamwis and Ottoman Kamenzi, the two most senior sports staff at The Getaway, couldn't recall an incident like this wherein a writer's words have so drastically affected a team's play on the pitch.

"Usually the old adage from coaches and athletes is, 'I'll let my playing do the talking,' Kamenzi, The Getaway's the sports editor said concerning the players' discontent with Bluesky's article.

"I don't care what you say or write about me, because I'm going to prove it on the pitch. But with his little ritualistic stunt, it seems what Eve's done is something that no writer has been able to ever do. I mean, if all we had to do to affect a team's play on the field was go down to the Saskatchewan River in the middle of the night and recite a bit of latin, maybe the football team's losing streak wouldn't have been as long."

"I find this concept of putting curses on teams pretty interesting," Hamwis said, before adding that if he could choose a team to help out or punish it wouldn't be Pandas soccer. "With such a dysfunctional management group at their helm, I would think the Oilers would be the first club to help out."

Hamwis was also quick to warn the Pandas soccer players that if they had beef with Bluesky, it should be with the curse she put on the team and not the article she wrote.

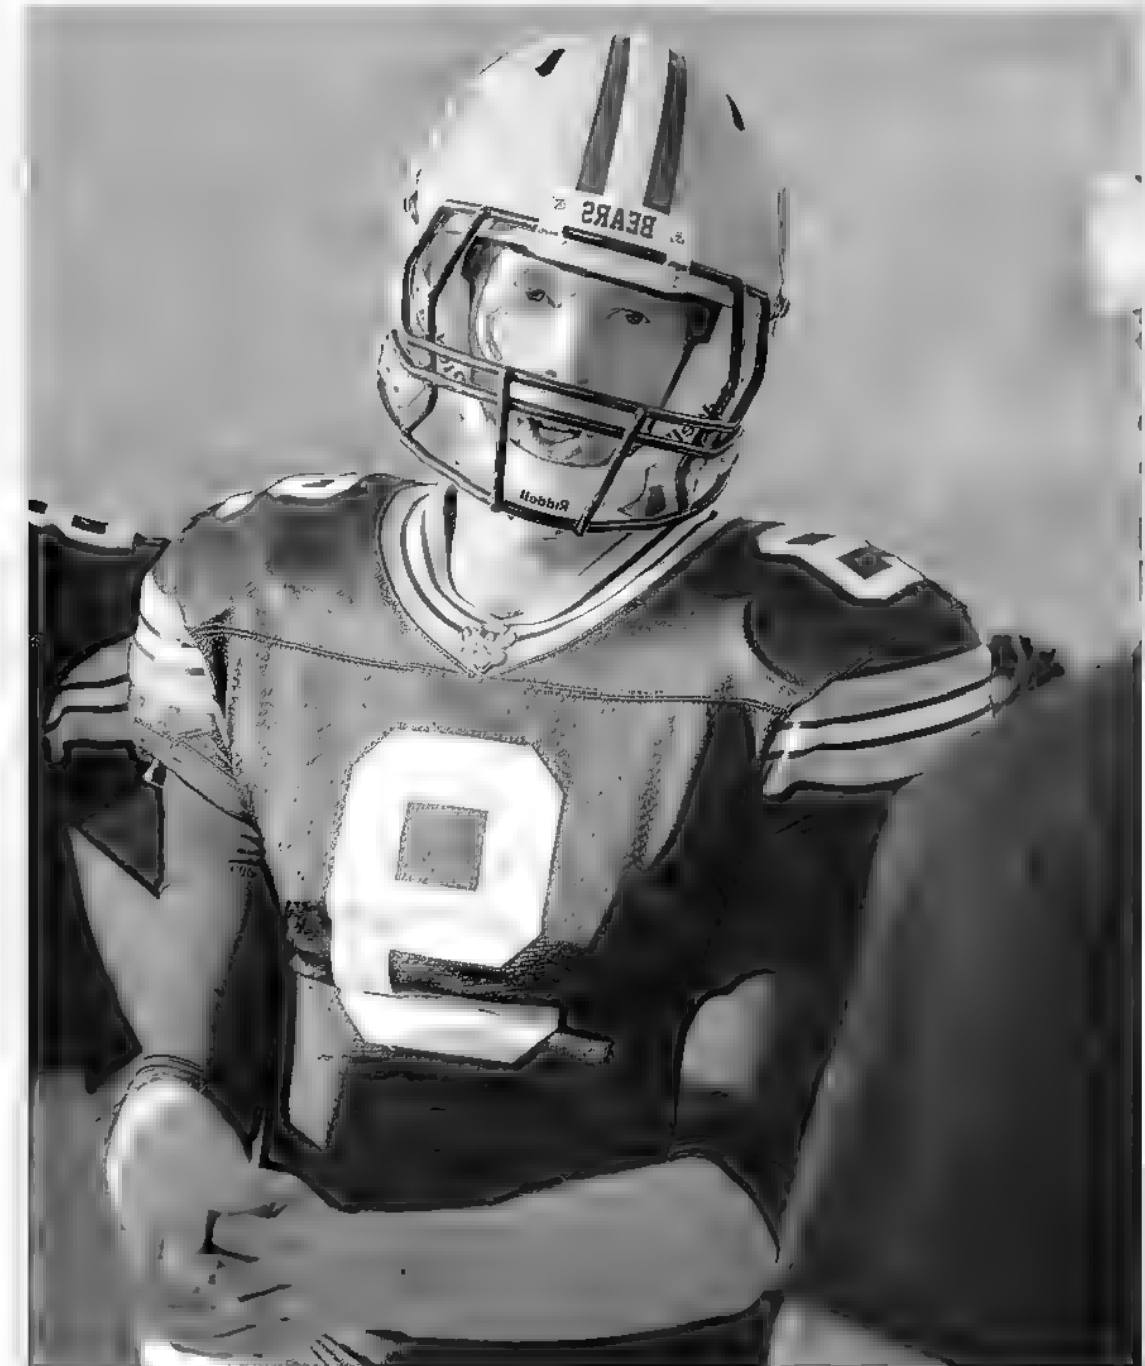

"It's funny because early on in the season, the team really liked Bluesky's writing, because she was a female soccer player like them, and now they're unhappy with her writing because they think that's what cost them the championship," Hamwis said. "But what they clearly don't understand is that it wasn't the article that caused them to lose or even their own play, but the curse that Bluesky put on the team."

For Bluesky, who refuses to gloat despite her clearly successful usage of the supernatural on the soccer team, the only hope is that other Golden Bears and Pandas student-athletes realize that they should watch out because if she feels like it, she could be coming for them next.

"I kinda like this new power," Bluesky said when asked about her next move. "I mean, I could single handedly be the reason why a team is or is not successful based entirely on how I want them to play. The good news for the athletes is that they won't have to waste their time practicing anymore, seeing as I will be the ultimate determiner of where their fates lie."

Bluesky is already in talks with numerous coaches and student-athletes about a price for her services, with the Bears football team reportedly prepared to pay a huge amount of money to guarantee their first win in 25 straight tries by going to Bluesky for her services, though she "currently (refuses) to accept cheques as those things have an unusual tendency to bounce."

"If any individuals want to pay me to help a certain team win or lose, you should know where to reach me. Just swing by Latin 102."

USING THE SHWARTZ I didn't lose a game last month. SOME DLDF

Bears

Athlete of the Year(s)
WRITTEN BY Brian Schwartz

QB BRIAN SCHWARTZ – FOOTBALL

After winning a record four Getaway Athlete of the Week honours earlier this fall — before Jordan Baker tied me last week — I, Bears quarterback Brian Schwartz have decided to award myself with the ultimate honour of being named the Getaway's Athlete of the Week for this week despite the football season ending more than a month ago. With the burdens of playing games now off of my shoulders, I have achieved what no other quarterback has been able to do at the U of A in three years: go through an entire month without losing a single game for the Bears. This is a glorious stat, which I can proudly carry on into next year.

Pandas

Gender's only a word guys
WRITTEN BY Brian Schwartz

QB BRIAN SCHWARTZ – FOOTBALL

Since the Pandas don't play football and there were no winless Pandas teams this season, the award for Athlete of the Week must go (again) to me, Bears fourth-year quarterback Brian Schwartz. My play with the Bears football team last month, despite the season being over, goes beyond simple gender distinctions and merits me the honour of being the top female athlete as well. But since it wasn't enough to give me, the ginger-haired quarterback from North Vancouver, both Athlete of the Week distinctions, the Getaway sports staff has also decided to name this week's section in honour of myself.

SPORTS SCHWARTZ My name, my section. #notimefor8trs SOME CHICK

Bears and Pandas hockey teams need more funding for new arena

Teams will move to MacEwan if demands aren't met for Clare Drake replacement

A PUCKLOAD OF MONEY
Coom
THE TOP DOG

With the deadline approaching to complete a deal to build the University of Alberta Golden Bears and Pandas hockey teams a new arena on campus, the U of A Athletics Department turned up the heat on the Students' Union by paying a cross-town visit to MacEwan University last weekend in a threat to move the U of A hockey teams if they don't get their way.

"We absolutely need a new arena for the U of A campus," the Athletics Department said in a press release. "This is probably the most passive aggressive, pretentious way we could possibly try to scare the university, the students, the fans and the city of Edmonton as a whole into meeting our ludicrous demands."

Off the record, a person familiar with the proceedings put the matter in more indelicate terms.

"The fact is we need a new arena, and if you aren't a tier one fan and you don't like it, you can shut your fucking mouth, you worthless piece of shit," the source said.

The UofA currently uses the Clare Drake Arena, the 2,700 seat multi-purpose arena built in 1959 and named after former hockey coach Clare Drake, who led the Golden Bears to 697 wins and multiple national championships. This old, decrepit arena, according to most, has seen its best days already and is in dire need of replacement.

"Once or twice, I've actually seen a few rodents scurrying around the place," an unnamed fourth-year student said. "Also, those wooden benches are extremely hard on the backside."

"The fact is we need a new arena, and if you aren't a tier one fan and you don't like it, you can shut your fucking mouth, you worthless piece of shit."

@UNAMED_SOURCE
A PERSON FAMILIAR WITH THE PROCEEDINGS

While the deal for a new arena was thought to be done last October with both sides agreeing, in principle, to secure funding for the new project despite warnings of major budget cuts to the university, plans fell through at the last minute with the Students' Union voting to delay the decision.

It's been widely speculated that the Athletics Department, coupled with the Pharmacy Department and the Katz Group — the parties who have been spearheading this project for over four years — are seriously contemplating moving the Bears and Pandas hockey teams to MacEwan as the end of the feasibility of Clare Drake as a top-tier arena hosting top-tier teams looms.

"This deal is great for the university and for all of its students, especially those of them that have never attended a hockey game at the U of A," the press release continued. "The fact that the university and Students' Union feel they need to worry about relatively petty issues such as budget cuts, rising tuition prices, professors being laid off or classes being cancelled, instead of investing in a new state-of-the-art facility for athletics that can provide a few short term jobs and make the area look a whole lot cooler, is pretty sad."

The new arena, which will be located on the old Varsity Field besides the Clare Drake Arena, is proposed to be a state-of-the-art multi-purpose arena that will be able to hold an estimated 3,200 fans, host potential University Cup tournaments and will "absolutely revitalize the fuck out of the west side of campus," according to a source familiar with the proceedings.

The cost for the project is estimated at around $400 million, which will mainly come from students' tuition and taxpayer money when all is said and done.

CLARE'S PLACE A group pushing for a new arena on campus is hoping for a similar deal that the Edmonton Oilers got. ATHLETIC DEPT. INTERN

BABY BEAR Jessie MacKay, a star linebacker, gave birth to twins. FLTLRFL OF A STUDENT PICS, INC.

Bears football star player gives birth to twin sons

Third-year linebacker gives birth after intense workout

THE OTHER FOOTBALL
Geoffery Instead
OF THE CURRENT COACH DUDE GUY

Consistently finishing at the bottom of the Canada West conference and without an on-field victory in three years means that good news is hard to come by for the Golden Bears football team. However, in a shocking turn of events, Bears third-year linebacker and 2013 Academic All-Canadian Jessie MacKay appears to have given birth to twins.

"The news is most shocking indeed," head coach Christian Morrison stated in the delivery room during the six hour labour. "MacKay always plays with his heart on his sleeve and certainly lets his emotions get the better of him at the best of times, but all that explains why he's such a valuable member of the team."

"Usually I can't stop watching her because she squats like an angel and it's the hottest thing I've ever seen ... but this time, after she went ass to grass on her last rep, all of a sudden the floor was all wet and shit."

@UNNAMED_SOURCE
A PERSON FAMILIAR WITH THE PROCEEDINGS

Despite Morrison's misuse of gender since the birthing of twins is a primary indicator that MacKay is not, in fact, a male, the revelation, though surprising to the coaching staff, that MacKay is a female has come at no surprise to the players.

"We all knew Jessie was a girl," quarterback Kurtis Bell said, adding that MacKay, a former rugby player, had transferred over to the Bears football team from the Pandas in order to instil that team's winning ways on the club. "It's hard to hide something like that, especially with a bunch of alpha males in one room. "We just didn't want to say anything to coach (Morrison), because she was our best player by far"

Though the identity of the twins' biological father has yet to be revealed, some players on the team remain skeptical about finding out who the twins' father really is.

"It could be any one of us," a disgruntled Bryan Scotts reluctantly admitted. "We got really close this season, did a lot of team bonding. A lot."

The bump of not one but two babies would generally raise some eyebrows, but apparently it was of no obvious concern as MacKay's play in training camp quickly earned her a spot starting as the linebacker in her third year of CIS eligibility.

"Once we hit the end of the season, a lot of our guys get a bit of a gut, so its not a huge shocker to see the guys round out a little around there," Morrison said.

The fifth-year Open Studies student went into labour during a weight session at the Saville Centre and, at the time, was reported to have been squatting in excess of 350 pounds.

"Some rookies are intimidated by upper-year students, but I wasn't by J-Dawg," a first-year redshirt safety stated referring to MacKay's team given nickname. "Usually I can't stop watching her because she squats like an angel and it's the hottest thing I've ever seen. She always screams when she squats, which turns me on so much that sometimes I've had to cut my workout short and leave, but this time, after she went ass to grass on her last rep, all of a sudden the floor was all wet and shit and someone had to call the hospital."

In true team fashion, the players came together at that moment and drove MacKay to the hospital. All 81 players were on hand in the delivery room and were reported to have been chanting "Come on Jessie, give us a win."

When the first of the twins, Tyler MacKay, weighing in at eight pounds with a DNF 40-yard time, was born, the players celebrated by dumping the Gatorade container over the doctor.

Three hours later, the second was born, and Alex MacKay weighed in at eight pounds one ounce with a DNF 40 yard time.

"These two miracles are reminiscent of the two we received two years ago when UBC gave us those default victories when we avoided our first ever winless season," Morrison said as he wiped away a tear from his eye.

The good news kept rolling as Kylor Tenory, the team's rookie wide-out and kick returner, returned the first born, Tyler, for 105 yards. A new hospital record.

Bears and Pandas turn to Jimmy for answers

Condom tackles drinking, court fines and low GPAs in his advice column for U of A student-athletes and coaches

jimmy condom's advice column

The sometimes-annual Getaway advice column for the U of A student-athlete or coach in need of some counsel.

Hey Jimmy,
I'm a coach of a varsity sports team on campus that's travelling to Florida during reading week for a few exhibition matches, but most of my players are under the age of 21. How can I give my players incentive to win if we can't celebrate afterwards due to the absurd drinking laws in other countries?

Bacardi Partier

Dear BP,
The obvious answer to your question is to buy the drinks yourself and stock them in your hotel room for your players to consume in secret! No harm, no foul, right? Drop me a line if you're strapped for cash and I'll be sure to wire some money to help you out!

Jimmy

Hi Jimmy,
I think that my coach went a little overboard after we beat Calgary last weekend, as she downed five tall boys in the locker room to demonstrate her satisfaction at beating the Dinos. She's my coach and I'm worried about confronting her about her behaviour. What should I do?

Shotgun Runner

Dear Shotgun Runner,
As adults, we all need to let loose sometimes, and clearly this was a situation where your coach felt she needed to do just that. The only question I would ask if I were you is what if the U of C's cleanup staff had discovered that your coach was consuming alcohol in their locker room, which would clearly violate the rules and could get you kicked out of the league? Since that obviously didn't happen (unless she spilled her booze on the locker room floor), then you should be grateful you have a coach who knows how to let her hair down.

Jimmy

Wat up Jimmy,
I was accidentally pulled over by the cops for speeding down Whitemud at 3 a.m. while drunk after a wicked night out on Whyte Ave. celebrating our Canada West championship. On top of that, I was caught urinating on the side of the road and got slapped with an $800 fine. How do I find the money to erase this mistake?

Piss Drunk

"What up" Piss Drunk,
All I can say is that were you at any other school (say MacEwan), you would be seriously and completely screwed! As it is, you're in luck. As a man who has done particularly well — especially financially — in his life, I have set aside a portion of my funds for student-athletes caught in situations just like yours. Just contact my staff at the Jimmy Condom Foundation — headquartered in Spruce Grove and currently accepting donations for the Christmas break — and they'll set you up with some money to help pay off your fines!

Jimmy

Dear Jimmy,
My GPA is hovering around 0.3 and I don't know how to boost it in time for finals to keep my eligibility for field hockey next fall. As the leading scorer on the Pandas, my teammates depend on me to be in the lineup each and every match. After missing the last two seasons due to a torn ACL and a student exchange to Australia, and usually relying on my coach — who used to teach my PAC class and give me the answers to the exams on road trips so I didn't have to worry about my grades — what's a girl supposed to do to get her grades up?

Down Under

Dear Down Under,
It's no wonder your GPA is sitting at a 0.3! If you were actually smart enough, you would've realized that there is no field hockey team since they were cut almost two seasons ago, happening sometime between your torn ACL and your Australia trip. My advice would be to transfer to MacEwan where the Griffins' academic standards are much lower than they are here, and where they'll need all the help they can get when they make the jump to CanWest next year.

Jimmy

Hiya Jimmy,
As a Bears coach currently helping to mold and shape the lives of young men, as well as making sure our team wins consistently, I've seemed to run into a rut in terms of motivating my players. I mean, all I have to do is look over at the Pandas team that plays their games before us to see that they're far more receptive to the message of what it takes to truly be a winning team. I want to leave the Bears and coach the Pandas, but I want to take my top two players with me. How can I accomplish this transition successfully and without any backlash?

Guba Bear

Dear Guba Bear,
The only problem that you could potentially run into is that of the small but important issue of creating an "accident" to get rid of the current Pandas head coach. Past that, according to my records, your current team has done particularly well under your tutelage. Getting your top two players to change over to the Pandas shouldn't be that big of an issue as long as they identify their gender (which is not the same as sex) as female.

Jimmy

Cheers Jimmy!
We're short a player for our upcoming annual invitation tournament and we need to field a full roster in order to compete. A bunch of boosters, alumni, friends and family of our student-athletes will be there and I don't need to say that it would be a little more than embarrassing for us not to be able to play at our own tournament. What should we do?

Loner Homer

Dear Loner Homer,
Do you have any assistant coaches who are the same gender as your players? If they are, then this is a no-brainer and I don't see what the problem is. Just dress one of your younger assistants in your team's uniform and nobody should be able to tell the difference. Just make sure that your assistant coach doesn't do anything stupid during the games though that could raise anyone's eyebrows.

rugby
football

9-0 Pandas vs. 0-8 Bears

PANDAS

46.1

A

23.5

PANDAS

PANDAS RUGBY

STATS		PANDAS
Total Points		46.1
Tries		5
Conversions		3
Penalty Goals		6
Tackles		1120
Penalties		-5
Total Metres		2440

A

BEARS FOOTBALL

STATS		BEARS
Total Points		23.5
Touchdowns		1
Conversions		1
Field Goals		3.5
Safety		6
Rouges		6
Total Yards		-365

SHOPPERS
DRUG MART

10907 - 82 Ave 780 433 2424 • 8065 - 104 St 780 433 3954

Holiday VIP shopping at Shoppers
Whyte Ave and 104 St. locations

Mention this ad and receive

20% OFF

regular-priced items in the cosmetics department until December 25
(some restrictions apply)

FREE
Gift-wrapping available!

 facebook.com/shoppersdrugmartonwhyte

NORQUEST
COLLEGE

Looking for university transfer credits?

Day or night, we're open to help you get ahead. Whether you're looking to ease your load or fit in an extra course, tap into NorQuest's expanded options for part-time, university transfer open studies credit courses.

Start in January.
780.644.6000
Step Forward | norquest.ca

BOOKING IT Bears hockey fifth-liner “Duster” knows exactly how to ace his bird course.

STUDENT-ATHLETE OFFICIAL PHOTOGRAPHER

Hockey player prepares for finals

EXAM PREVIEW

Chuck “Duster” Slick vs. Windings 101

Thursday, Dec. 12
Tory Basement

The Pink Fox

10X BETTER THAN THE PINK PANTHER

Finals. Dislike ‘em or hate ‘em, they are undoubtedly every university student’s intro into Dante’s nine levels of hell.

In an exclusive interview with Chuck “Duster” Slick yesterday, a lesser-known fifth-line player on the Golden Bears hockey team, The Getaway got the inside story on just how the average student-athlete gears up for the big gam ... um, final.

“Wingdings 101 is just a gong show,” Slick, a fifth-year red shirt with the Bears and a philosophy major, said when asked how he felt about the class.

“I was taking a full course load anyways and needed an easy course to sort of lighten the load a little bit, so my buddies signed me up for it and they were just like, ‘Naw man, s’all good. This class is easy.’ I didn’t even think it was real, but it was all online, so I just went for it and gave it 110 per cent and literally got 110 per cent. It was great. I never had to go to class and my computer’s been broken down for the past couple months, so I had no assignments to do all term.”

With no notes to speak of and having never attended a class in person, when asked how he intended to prepare for his final, Slick gave a precise game plan.

“I’m just gonna give ‘er,” Slick said. “You never score any goals if you don’t take any shots. You just gotta be able to prepare for every type of question, because you never know what the prof’s gonna throw at you. You don’t know if it’s going to be a hard question or an easy one or somewhere in between, so you can’t take any questions lightly. But I know if I don’t treat this exam any differently than any others I’ve taken and stay focused for the whole 180 minutes, then I should expect to see some pretty good results.”

Adding that he plans to “go to the ODR with my laptop and study there,” The former Prince Albert Raider was quick to put to rest any doubts that the he wouldn’t be able accomplish any form of studying in the minus damn-too-cold weather.

“I mean, I played in friggin’ north Sasky, so if anyone can withstand the cold, it’s me,” the fifth-liner said. “My teammates and coaches both know that I don’t muck around on the ice — on or off of it. You gotta keep focused and go for the goal. I figure if I can handle doing this thing in the worst conditions with my bucket on and the boys chirping me left and right, then I can ace this thing.”

Like any other student, Slick has exciting plans for when finals are finally over.

“I’m probably just going to shotgun a couple Buds and go to The Ranch with my boys. But if I see ‘Ballsy’ and ‘Lebs’ there, I wouldn’t rule out asking either one of them to dance. And I don’t mean the two-step ... I mean fighting. I’d kick their ass. I’d ... I’d fight them, get it?”

Slick later found out that his exam had been cancelled last minute due to his prof’s food poisoning at a recent Oilers loss at Rexall Place and the fifth-line forward received an unprecedented final grade of A++ in the course — no doubt a testament to his resilience and resolve as a player who’s prepared for any and all situations.

DOLPHINTALE CIS refuses to adopt legendary athlete in sports hall.

MRS. DOLL FIN

Controversy surrounds CIS Hall of Fame hopeful

TO COOL 4 POOL

COOOOOOOOM

COOOOMS.COM

With CIS Hall of Fame voting quickly approaching, the winds of a hurricane of controversy have picked up around former University of Alberta superstar swimmer Tom Dolphin regarding whether or not this athlete — who many consider to be the greatest university swimmer of all time — deserves to be forever enshrined in CIS history.

“Men lie, women lie, children lie, but facts don’t lie,” CIS Hall of Fame committee member Conner Baker said regarding Dolphin’s historic career. “And the facts say that Tom is the single greatest swimmer in CIS history, and possibly the history of human athletics too.”

Dolphin was suspended indefinitely last year when reports surfaced that he was not actually, in fact, a human athlete, but a dolphin.

“The issue regarding Mr. Dolphin is not his credentials or achievements, but the fact that he cheated and he lied,” swimming expert Trevor Ramsey stated regarding his thoughts on Dolphin’s chances of being inducted to the Hall of Fame, adding that the fact he isn’t a human and is actually a dolphin is also a huge contributing obstacle.

The issue has polarized fans and supporters of the league, and also human and animal rights activists all across the nation.

“Does it say anywhere that you have to be a human to compete in Canadian Interuniversity Sport? Can somebody please show me where that rule was written?” animal rights activist Jessica Bailey demanded. “This is just another gross example of elitism in human-dominated sports that’s become so detrimental to our society.”

For Fred Peters, a devoted fan of university swimming and echoing the sentiments of many fans, “Tom is like the Jackie Robinson of our sport and our era,” amd now just needs “a Branch Rickey to push him through to the top and the game will be changed forever.”

Tom Dolphin refused to comment on the issue, as he was swimming around majestically in his tank at the Edmonton Zoo at the paper’s publishing deadline.

Getaway finally decides to cut sports coverage after 103 years

THE END OF AN ERA

Meagm Binjki

SO LONG...SOOOOOOOO LOOOOOOONNNNGGGG

After years of tumultuous debate, nasty arguments and bruised feelings that will keep multiple Getaway staff members on the injured reserve list for two to three weeks, it has been decided that this publication — in an effort to maximize profits and maintain a competitive edge against acclaimed student-run newspapers The Sniff, and The Lazy Faire — will cut its Sports section from the upcoming 2014–15 calendar year.

“To be quite honest with you, this is complete and utter bullshit,” long-time Getaway volunteer and current Getaway sports editor Otto Kamazi said, in pure disbelief.

“Apparently having 10 volunteers at my disposal, each bringing serious viewership to The Getaway doesn’t mean much. This whole situation is more embarrassing than the Toronto Star’s obsession with Rob Ford.”

Feelings of malaise didn’t end there as representatives from the Golden Bears and Pandas varsity teams contacted The Getaway in rampant fury.

“Who’s gonna talk about our accomplishments now?” mused a disappointed Pandas soccer player who chose to remain anonymous. “I thought the whole point of the student newspaper was to talk about students and student-athletes especially. What the hell are they even going to write about now if not us?!”

U of A sports Athletic Director Ian-na Wright was visibly upset with the motion, stating that “The Getaway’s single purpose was to offer free PR for our varsity-athletes, and now that this has been taken away, we’re gonna have to axe another sport — probably a women’s sport — to try and raise enough funds to get more goddamn PR for our athletes.”

When pressed for which sport would be cut, Wright declined to comment and left the interview, stating she had to attend to her pet snake who was giving birth.

Despite the controversy, The Getaway Editor-in-Chief Jeffery Andrews still maintains his position about the decision.

“Sports is a total eye-sore and our teams blow. I’d much rather just fill those pages with Doge-memes, Fuck God Damn.”

TEACH ENGLISH OVERSEAS

- ✓ Travel the world with Global Tesol
- ✓ Get TESOL certified in five days
- ✓ Study in-class, online or by correspondence
- ✓ Overseas job guaranteed
- ✓ Call today for a free info package

FREE Seminar Jan. 14 @ 7pm, St. Joseph's College, U of A • TESOL Course Dec. 18-22

1-888-270-2941 • globaltesol.com
YOUR ADVENTURE STARTS HERE!

UNIVERSITY OF CALGARY

SOCIAL WORK

Social Work Education

IN EDMONTON

BSW Info Sessions

Tuesday, Jan. 14th, 12:00 noon
Thursday, Jan. 30th, 12:00 noon
Thursday, Feb. 13th, 5:00 pm

444, 11044 Whyte Ave, Edmonton • 780.492.3888

Apply now for fall 2014 admission to the undergraduate program. BSW admission routes for post-diploma and university transfer applicants. MSW admission routes for both BSW and other degree holders (admitting every other year on odd-numbered years).

Prospective students: fsw.ucalgary.ca/fswcentralandnorth

BSW APPLICATIONS RECEIVED UNTIL MAR. 1, 2014.
Equality • Collaboration • Diversity • Individuals • Families • Communities

Austin Acheouts catching onto latest pro sports coaching trend

Rookie head coach reportedly looking for new ways to influence games from the bench

NO PUCKING WAY
@Rig.Pig80
MASTER OF THE "HUMANGOUS BIG" UNIVERSE

In the wake of recent professional head coaches employing the tactic of bending — but not breaking — the rules of their respective leagues, sources close to the team have confirmed that Edmonton Oilers head coach Austin Acheouts has been holding additional practices with his assistants to brainstorm and perform different strategies in which the rookie bench boss could more indirectly directly influence games.

"We saw some irregular behaviour in the scrimmages at the Oilers' practice Wednesday," a top league official confided to The Getaway, noting that as players would skate by his bench, Acheouts' actions would range from pretending to get hit — by both the puck and players — and making quick and exaggerated arm movements in the direction of Hammer Muskupov and Riley James in hopes of making them flinch or shortly lose focus on the game.

"These plays proved successful when, at one point, the practice briefly stopped as players rushed over to the bench to see if their coach was hurt," the league official said, requesting anonymity.

It's interesting to note that all this conspicuously comes after recent events in recent weeks in which multiple coaches gained national attention for making contentious moves that had direct impacts on their teams' games.

In the NBA, Brooklyn Nets coach Jason Kidd, with no timeouts left in a close game with the Los Angeles Lakers, "dropped" his drink onto the court as guard Tyshawn Taylor bumped into him, thus causing an automatic break in the game as officials cleaned up the spill. Meanwhile, Kidd turned the stoppage into an impromptu timeout and drew up the next play for the Nets.

Replays later showed Kidd mouthing what appears to be the words "hit me" just before Taylor knocked the drink out of his hand, and just one day later in the NFL, Pittsburgh Steelers head coach Mike Tomlin was caught straddling the sideline while Baltimore Ravens kick-returner Jacoby Jones was forced to slow down to avoid hitting Tomlin, allowing a chasing Steelers defender to catch up and tackle him.

While both Kidd and Tomlin were given hefty fines by their respective leagues, Acheouts doesn't seem afraid of receiving the same consequence.

"I think he believes with the inconsistency the NHL has in terms of disciplining players around the league, he has a decent chance of getting away with little or no repercussions," a source close to the team told The Getaway. "With the recent play of the team, he also feels he needs to do what he can to win."

Whether he actually goes through with these moves in real games, some speculate that this newfound skill by Acheouts has given the Oilers a new wrinkle to their arsenal, and fans should expect to see some interesting things on the bench.

Oilers announce new official partnership initiative with local drinking establishments

Club sees opportunity to improve community outreach with the City of Edmonton

DRUNK AS PUCK
c00oom
GIFT-GIVER-IN-CHIEF

It's the ho-ho-holidays! And this Christmas season, the players on the Edmonton Oilers are planning to engage in the spirit of giving more than anybody else by spicing up the boring, depressing lives of Edmontonians at local bars.

"The Edmonton Oilers-Whyte Ave. Community Involvement Project is an incredibly important initiative within our glorious organization," Oilers president, general manager, overlord and whatever the hell he has promoted himself to these days, Devin Mow said yesterday at a hastily arranged press conference regarding what's known around the organization as the Night Life Exchange at the Sutton Place Hotel.

"This is a great way to share some of the greatness of this organization through a winning project, and don't

I know a little something something about winning. Just look at my four, no five, no six rings as a player. And my nearly impeccable record as a general manager."

The initiative, which is in its first year of a three-year official pilot partnership between the Oilers and the Whyte Ave. business community, will see Oilers players attend local nightclubs on 82 Ave. after every single game — regardless of the outcome or their performance — to hit on girls and get into arguments with frustrated locals in the bathroom.

"Edmonton is a truly awful place to live Jesus Christ, this place is just terrible," Oilers superstar and former first round pick Sailor Hallway said. "It's great that god-like figures like us can spice up the lives of these people who are so unfortunate to have to have to live in such a goddamn cold, dark and depressing city. But what-ehs — we might not win on the ice, but we sure as hell score off of it."

Fans will be allowed to purchase tickets to the nightclubs that the players decide to attend through the Oilers Community Outreach program for the reasonably low price of $150, and that's only if you have a valid ticket stub from that night's game. Season ticket owners and so-called "tier-one" fans will "of course" be offered a discount and will be given "a priority" over other fans, explained Lowe.

"I got to tell a guy that chirped me in the restroom for not backchecking hard enough that I made more in one season than he'll make in his entire life," sniper Gordon Evereh explained. "Then after that, I hooked up with three girls in a span of, like, 45 minutes. It really feels great to give back to the community in such a powerful way."

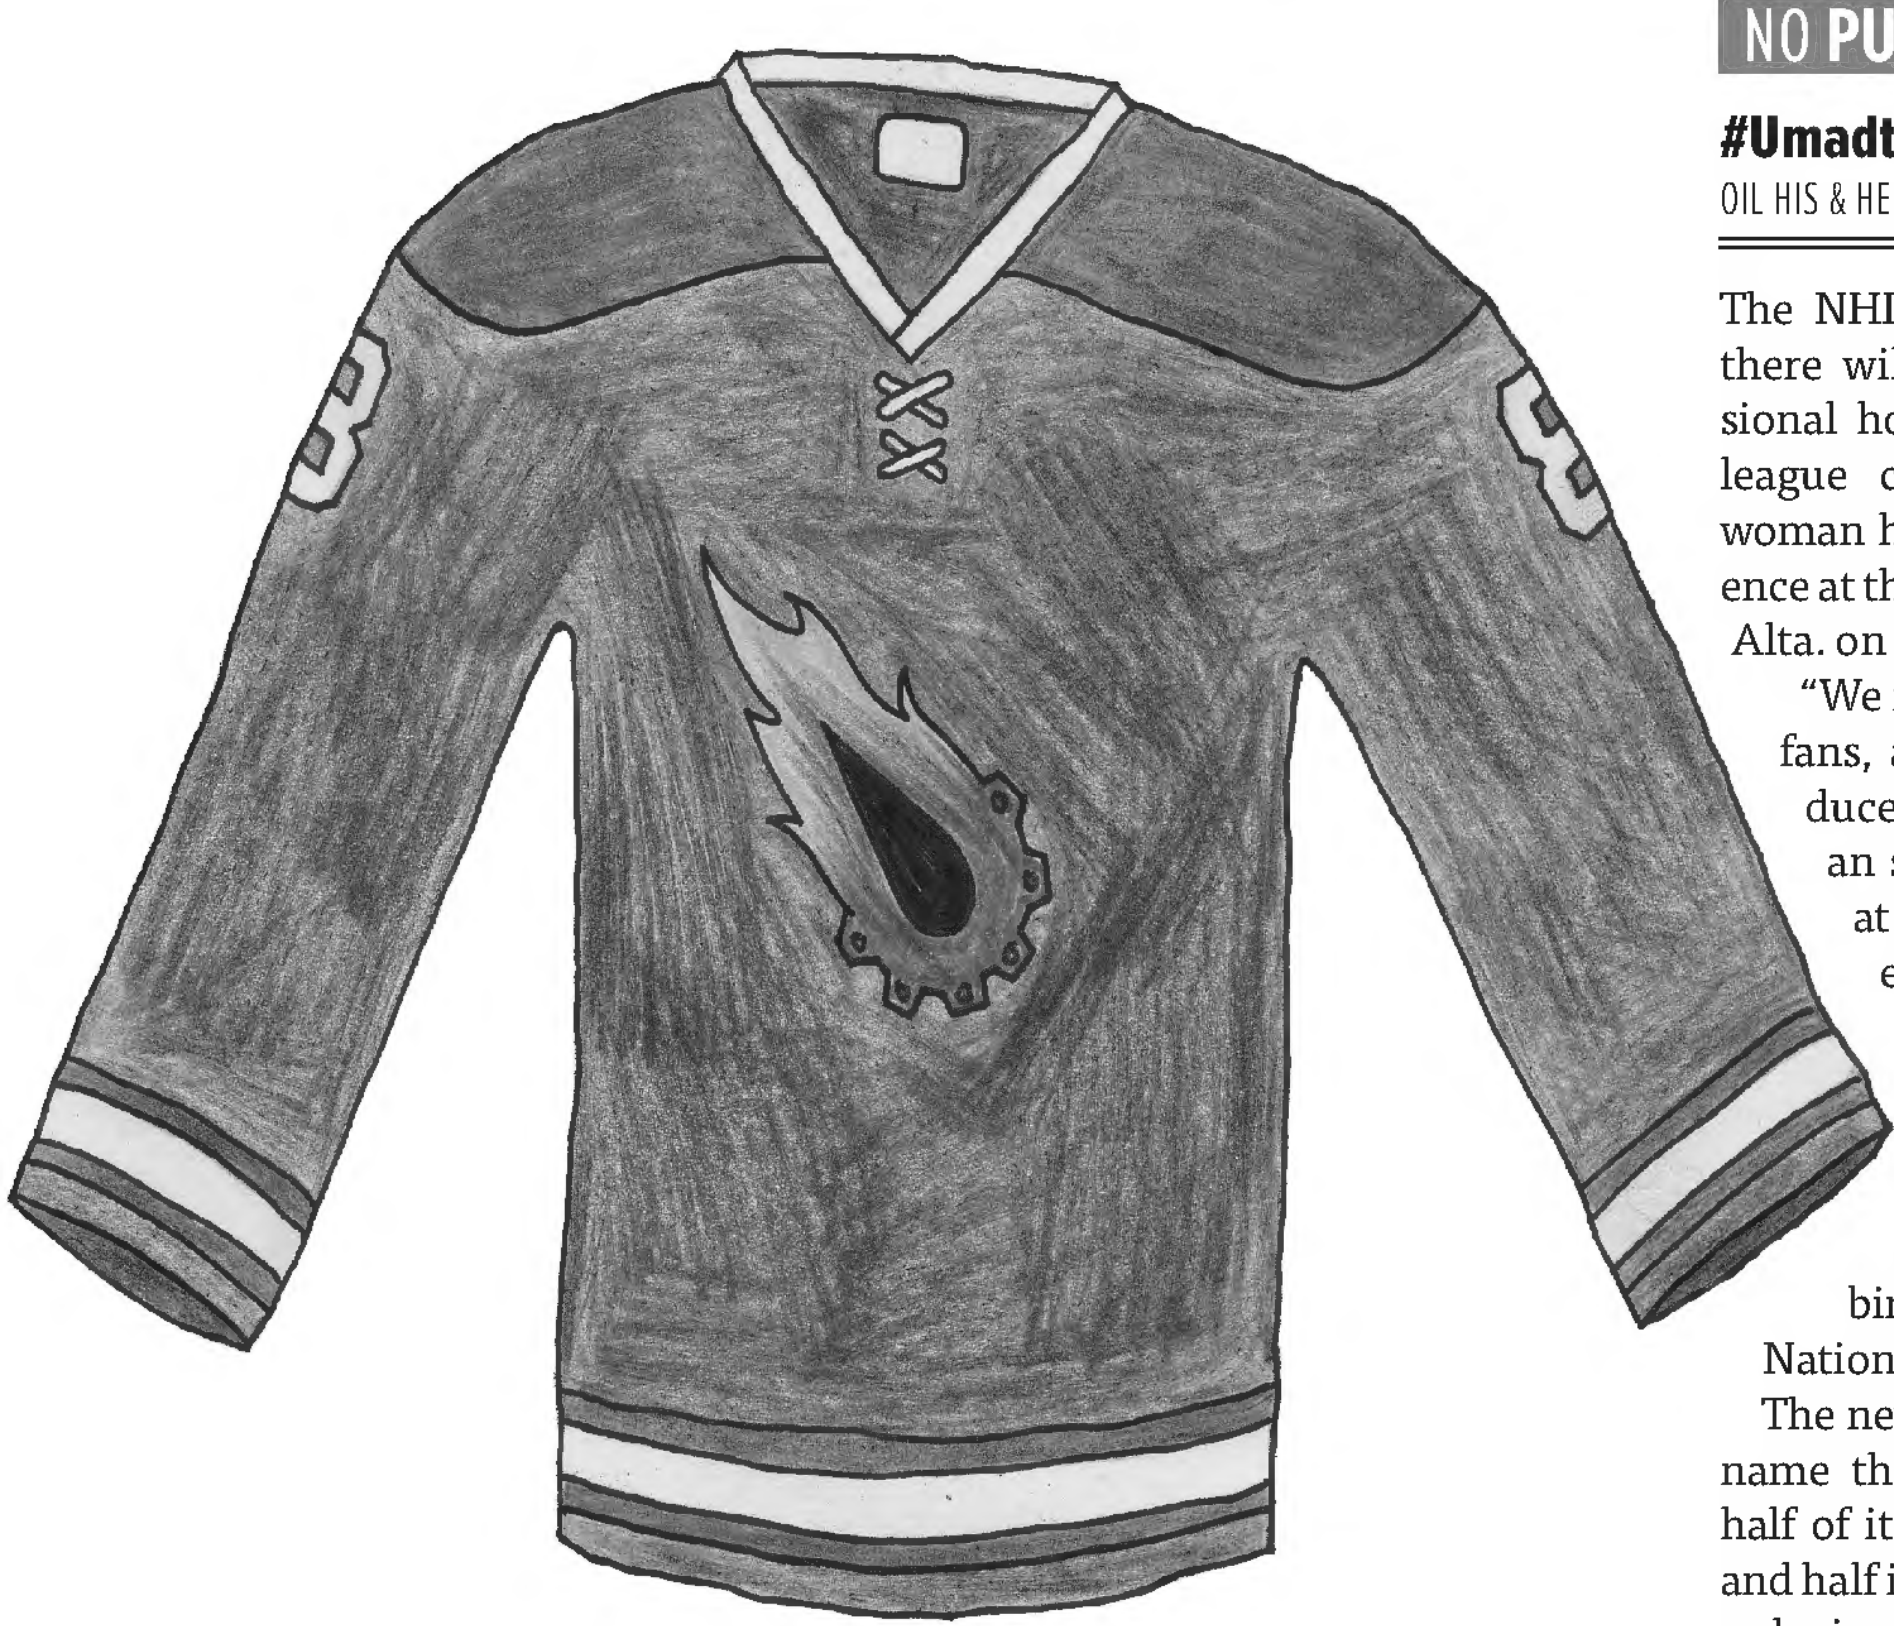

Oilers captain Drew Fairfence was unavailable for comment as he was busy helping local kids learn the importance of protecting the environment while the announcement was being made.

THEY CAN'T STOP Oilers new partnership is sure to cause some serious frenzy among the weekend crowd. THE WAITRESS WHO SLRIVES ON TIPS

Oilers and Flames to merge into new “Alberta” NHL team

ALBERTA FLAILERS The new alternate jersey for the new Alberta hockey club. OILAMES.COM

NO PUCKING WAY

#Umadthoughbro
OIL HIS & HERS CORRESPONDENT

The NHL announced yesterday that there will soon be only one professional hockey team in Alberta, with league commissioner Carrie Bettawoman hastily calling a press conference at the Sheraton hotel in Red Deer, Alta. on Tuesday to break the news.

“We really feel for Alberta hockey fans, and as such, we want to reduce their suffering,” Bettawoman said from a prepared speech at last evening’s press conference. “Clearly it has become extremely evident that neither Edmonton nor Calgary can run a team effectively. Therefore, the league has decided to step in and combine their resources into one National Hockey League team.”

The new team, which will go by the name the Alberta Flailers, will play half of its home games in Edmonton and half in Calgary. The hope is that by reducing the number of home games in each city, the team will boost its attendance and charge more for games.

The Flailers will sport bright yellow jerseys so the players can find each other more easily on the ice, with red and blue highlights to show respect for the former teams. The team’s new logo will be the sliding man from “Caution, Wet Floor” signs as a symbol to accurately represent the direction both teams were heading prior to the merger.

“We may not have the brightest players in the world, but we sure as hell have the most talented,” Oilers and soon to be Flailers co-general manager Greg MacLavish said yesterday. It was also announced that both the Flames and Oilers front offices will manage the team, perhaps actually being able to produce a winning hockey team now that will they have access to the best Oilers and Flames players.

“These jersey designs will hopefully help speed up the rebuilding process, though fans will have to hang tight for an additional three to four seasons of the now joint restructuring as our players get used to playing with each other,” MacLavish said.

For some fans, the move to join the Oilers and Flames into one team means putting aside decades of pent up animosity in an opportunity to unite behind the provincial flag.

“I’m really excited about the move,” says long time season-ticket holder Christian Yates. “I’ve been watching the Oilers struggle for years, so it’s nice to know that now instead of hating Calgary, Flames fans can collectively share in our pain as our two crappy teams combine into one franchise. The Roughriders have been able to do it successfully (in Saskatchewan) by uniting under one team regardless of municipal affiliation and hopefully we’ll be able to do the same here.”

Yates also noted that this past season, he couldn’t even give his tickets away because the Oilers sucked so badly, but he hopes that with fewer games at soon-to-be Rogers Place will mean that there will be “more buyers out there.”

In order to keep the league at an even 30 teams, Bettman also announced yesterday that a new franchise will be awarded to Honolulu, Hawaii as part of Bettawoman’s continued expansion of the league into non-traditional markets with the new team expecting to begin play next season as well as host to the first Heritage Classic outside of Canada in February of 2015 as per the terms of the new team’s expansion deal.

NBA’s Utah Jazz to sing new tune after switch to more modern name

ALL THAT JAZZ

Trouble Clef
MUSE-ICAL CORRESPONDANT

The Utah NBA team has finally decided to acknowledge that it’s the 21st century and jazz music isn’t relevant anymore, and have opted to move ahead with a name change. Ditching the antiquated “Jazz” nickname, team officials announced that starting in the 2014-15 NBA season, the Utah-based club will be renaming themselves the Utah Dubstep in order to “appeal to a younger generation of potential fans,” one person familiar with the change said yesterday.

Along with the new team name, other significant changes are expected to take hold. Both home and road uniforms will now reportedly include spirit hoods in order to appeal to a “raving” young audience and, taking a page out of the Toronto Raptors’ book, the Jazz have announced they will be hiring noted DJ Kill-her-ex as their new global brand ambassador.

“It really just seemed like the perfect fit,” team general manager Boris Kennedy said, while Kill-her-ex seemed just as excited about the new partnership.

“I really believe this is a great opportunity,” the DJ said from behind his laptop. adding that he really wants to see how the large Mormon community in Utah responds to “my brand of music.”

All in all, it seems like this partnership will be beneficial to both parties, as the franchise’s season ticket sales have gone up by 50 per cent since it was announced that Kill-her-ex would be brought in, and Kill-her-ex, in turn, has announced plans to release all his albums with special album art featuring members of the newly-named Dubstep.

His latest album, Scary Sprites and Nice Monsters, now features some soon-to-be Dupstep players on the cover in various poses of distress.

Distractions

Dungeon Master
Tony Squirtz

Shemale
squirtz@getaway.youalberta.xxx

Phony
911.492.6663

Toddler
@atsymbol

Please visit me I am lonely
My personal address is 10800 97 Ave NW, Edmonton, AB, T5K0B7

SUPEREGO by Jesse P. Jean

WUH-OH by Mikayla Jimson

IN BETWEEN SUMMER by Ronin Coup

su-dope-ku Literally every 4 x 4 box should just have the word "DOPE" written in it 4 times.

	P		O
				E			P
		D
O
	P						E
	E	O
D				E			P
	O
					O
		D	P
	P						E

Puzzle by www.awebsite.com

THE HECK'S A LUNGFISH? from Antwerp, Georgia

I'm so rich
that when I have company over

it's called a corporation.

PROBABLY OVER THE LINE by Mikhail S. Hah

BUT SERIOUSLY, IT'S JOKE TIME

Q: What do you get when you cross a crocodile with a chicken?
A: Unpleasant intercourse and almost certainly a sterile offspring.

GREY CAT 2 by Antigone

YEAR LONG CAFE by St. Jung

STUDIO107DANCECLUB.COM

@studio107yegSTUDIO 107 DANCECLUB@STUDIO 107 DANCECLUB#studio107yeg

STUDIO 107 DANCECLUB

CLUB 780

TWO FLOORS

ONE PARTY

MEGA NYE PARTY

24

TICKETS 780-934-CLUB

HORS D'OEUVRES

PARTY FAVOURS

CHAMPAGNE AT MIDNIGHT

MIDNIGHT MADNESS PUBCRAWL

10 Bars • 5 Routes • 1 Unforgettable Night Tuesday December 31 Tickets Online At NEWYEARSCRAWL.COM

CANADA
CRAWLS

YEG PARTY GUIDE

tonie
tuesday

$2.25 ALL DRAFT • $4 HIBALLS
$2 TAQUITOS

THE OLD STRATHCONA RACK

LEGENDARY

THROW BACK THURSDAYS

75 CENT DRAFT
$4.00 HIBALLS

NO COVER ALL NIGHT
WITH STUDENT ID OR INDUSTRY PAY STUB

DJ KENNY K & DJ CARTER
RETRO - DANCE - COUNTRY HITS - TOP 40

KNOXVILLE'S TAVERN

PINT WHYTE'S BOOK BUYBACK BASH

WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 18

Exchange textbooks for Pint dollars!
Skip the lineups at the bookstore, bring your textbooks down to
The Pint and get their dollar value* in Pint GC's [no expiry date]

*as determined by the UofA Bookstore website

5PM - MIDNIGHT  THE PINT WHYTE AVENUE LOCATION

Sailin' On X-MAS pop up

THURSDAY DECEMBER 19 | 6PM

sailin' on takes over the buckingham kitchen to bring you their signature vegan menu

Service from 6pm - Late | featuring dj jebus

 THE BUCKINGHAM
10439 whyte ave - www.thebuckingham.ca